In the Armstrong homestead in Caledon Township, a girl and boy are dead as the result of a horrible tragedy enacted last Thursday in the home, when James Stevens, a 15-year-old Barnardo lad who had been adopted by the family, cut the throat of 14-year-old Violet Armstrong and then ended his own life in similar fashion. The unfortunate girl was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Armstrong. The boy was secured by them from the Barnardo Home in Toronto last Easter. Whatever motive actuated the lad to such an awful deed is shrouded in the deepest mystery. As far as can be learned the children had never quarreled. The girl, who was a graduate of Orangeville High School, was of a bright and cheerful disposition, and the boy, ever since he was taken into the family, had conducted himself in such an exemplary manner that his good conduct had often been commented upon. He did his work willingly and had earned the good opinion of everyone in the home and neighbourhood. The household consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, Violet, and an 11-year-old son, and is one of the most highly regarded in the district. No one witnessed the deed and the first intimation of it was when Mrs. Armstrong, coming from the cowshed, saw blood on the verandah and following it, found the dead body of her daughter, clad only in a nightgown, lying beside the pump bathed in blood, with a terrible gash in the throat. After the mother had carried the girl into the house she found the boy dead beside his own bed, he having cut his own throat apparently after he had murdered the girl and then rushed to his room.

At its meeting Friday evening, Shelburne Council received an auditor's report from the office of Fred Page Higgins & Company, chartered accountants, of Toronto, of the town books for 1911-12-13-14. The audit disclosed that in 1911 Mr. H. Falconer, as town treasurer, had deposited to the town bank account $64.60 more than he actually received. During 1912 he deposited $25.84 less than he received which still left a balance of $38.76. The report shows current liabilities at the end of 1914 to have been in excess of current assets by $470.67 without adding the $38.87 due Mr. Falconer. The report said that if all monies were deposited as soon after their receipt as possible, and an agreement made between the cash book and the bank book, occasionally, an error or omission would have been immediately detected. We would suggest in order to prevent a recurrence of anything of this kind, that it be made incumbent on the treasurer to deposit all monies as received, and that he make his deposit slips out in duplicate, having the duplicate initialed at the bank.

Messrs. Bert Wheelock, son of county treasurer C. R. Wheelock; J. B. Akin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Akin, West Broadway, and Don McLaren, son of Mrs. John McLaren, of Toronto, formerly of Orangeville, have volunteered for service in the 3rd Canadian Contingent, which is now in the process of organization for overseas service. The young men expect to be placed with one of the machine gun squads.

A Canadian Club has been organized in Orangeville with officers as follows: President, A. R. Hughson; 1st vice-president Mayor Campbell; 2nd vice-president Dr. R. N. Klynes; secretary, R. H. Neilson; treasurer, W. G. Hyland. The club will hold its inaugural meeting and a banquet on April 14, when President Falconer, of Toronto University, will be the guest of honour.

?ith Shelburne Council as host and Reeve Phil Franchetto presiding, as meeting was held in the Cedar Room of Shelburne Arena last week with representatives from township councils and planning boards in attendance to hear Jack Delaney of the Ontario Department of Industrial Development present an address explaining the work of his department in assisting industry to locate in Ontario.

After Mr. Delaney's address, a lengthy question and answer session was held in which it became fairly evident that rural areas would have to develop their own promotion campaigns with the department providing any guidance it has developed with its experience in the past. It was suggested that areas seeking industry would do well to examine their various resources and attractions and evaluate them in terms of usability by industries which they might expect to attract.
