Dufferin County Council has been presented with a tax levy increase of 5.6 per cent for the 2025 budget.

During their meeting on Jan. 9, Dufferin County Council was given a presentation overview of the draft 2025 budget from Aimee Raves, manager of corporate finance and treasurer for the County of Dufferin.

Raves noted in the budget overview that the 2025 draft budget has been impacted by a number of external factors, including federal and provincial policy changes and funding, economic conditions and pressure in the labour market.

‘These factors put not only direct financial pressure on the County, but also affect staff and resource capacity,’ Raves wrote in the budget document. ‘Expenses have increased significantly, mostly due to planned capital work which will require borrowing. Another large portion of the increase is offset by government transfers and a continued strategy to mitigate some of the remaining impact by applying reserves.’

The total operating expenses for 2025 in the County of Dufferin is $161,636,000.

‘[It’s] a significant jump over 2024, mainly due to the larger capital projects,’ explained Raves.

To maintain the status quo going into 2025, the County of Dufferin would require $48,989,000 in tax levy, which would be an increase of 3.2 per cent or 1.5 million.

Dufferin County staff has a proposed $1,841,000 in additions to the status quo tax levy. The additional included new staff positions valued at $413,000, previously committed project valued at $295,000 and new projects costing $1,133,000.

The additions and the factoring in of growth leaves a proposed tax levy increase of 5.6 per cent, which is approximately $22.40 for each $100,000 of assessment.

During the meeting, Raves summarized major initiatives and projects supporting the County of Dufferin's Strategic Plan.

The projects were broken down into five categories:
