HONOURING HUMBOLDT: Shelburne's Home Hardware held an impromptu fundraiser last Thursday (April 12) to help the survivors, and families of those lost, in the horrific incident that claimed the lives of 15 members of the Humboldt Broncos Jr. hockey organization and one journalist on April 6. A barbecue held outside raised $820 in just four hours, with in-store donations taking the overall total to more than $1,000. Pictured above, local residents showing their support on Jersey Day for Humboldt Broncos, while the Shelburne store pays its respects by lowering its flags to half mast and displaying a pair of hockey sticks beside the main entrance.

Doug Ford and Hydro

There's an old episode of Seinfeld of a job is worth a $6.2 million salary where a well-to-do gentleman of the upper crust is seen eating his Snickers Bar with a knife and fork.

Sure enough, the trend catches on at least in the world of Seinfeld - and everyone starts eating their candy bars, donuts, and cookies with a knife and fork instead of picking them up with their fingers like a normal person.

It's a jab at how 'common people' view those who might have a little more than the rest of us. The joke is we all put our pants on one leg at time and nothing is going to change that.

Ontario Progressive Conservative leader Doug Ford's recent announcement that if elected, he will do whatever is in his power to fire the top Hydro One executive along with some of his henchman making the big bucks certainly resonates with the 'common folk' of Ontario who are paying a lot for electricity.

Realistically, even Ford's advisers admit there's really nothing he can do to outright fire the CEO of Hydro One, but his attitude sure is in the right place and many Ontarians do wonder what kind especially when a good chunk of it is paid for by us – the taxpayers.

"The party's over with the taxpayer's money, we're going to start respecting the taxpayers," Ford said, repeatedly saying the money spent on Hydro One salaries is "morally indefensible."

To be fair, Hydro One is not a wholly owned public corporation any more. A good chunk of it was sold off by the Liberal government in a revenue generating bid, however nearly 50 per cent is still owned by us - the public.

Usually when referring to CEOs who make huge bucks, there is a comparison to what other people in the same position make. In private business they use that to justify some of the huge salaries people at the top make. In truth, they aren't really worth the huge dollars they earn and everyone at the top knows this. But as long as the top guy is getting paid a massive salary, all his underlings are as

It's better to smile and collect a huge salary than point out that your boss isn't very good at his job.

I used to work at a large company where the big shots were paid big money. One president was dropped in one year from who knows where. He lasted for two years and made more money in that couple of years than the average middle management person would make in two lifetimes at the going rate. He floundered in the job and was fired. When he left, they gave him an $8 million cheque as a going-away present - for his poor performance.

When it comes to public money, everyone should be accountable.

The previous CEO of Hydro One was paid a salary of $741,000 in 2014. What could possibly justify an increase to over $6 million just four years later?

Ontario has the highest hydro rates in the country by far - more than double that of Manitoba and Quebec and a lot higher than every other province.

When paying these outrageous salaries, the old excuse is about paying for the 'best person' for the job with the most talent, the most brains, and the most experience.

Sure sounds good, but the truth is no where he deserves $6 million and would turn down the job for a paltry amount of less compensation and the second best candidate would be worth only $2 million.

Ford made a smart move when he made his announcement. He brought a chart showing the salaries of other people doing the exact same job in other provinces. The difference in salary was startling and pretty much proved Ford's

From the Queen to the plumber who lives next door, if that person disappeared there is someone else who is qualified and will step in and fill the position.

For some reason there's always this mystique about people in the top echelon, but the truth is they eat their Snickers Bars the same way the rest of us do.

A short story: Jack's Winter

LEE DUNN SCENTS AND SENSIBILITY

Jack sat in the living room of his big old house, chewing on a dry sandwich of rve bread and rubber cheese slices. No butter. Too hard to spread. A container labelled "Milkshake" was in his left hand, to wash it down. Too tired to bother reading labels anymore, he knew that the cheese and the milkshake were likely made of some chemical cocktail, and about as nutritious as eating Kleenex.

Surrounded by stacked up boxes, he front window, waiting on the movers to come. Now, at 69, Jack was alone. Irene had died six weeks before, and Jack didn't want this house anymore. Sure, he could move in with his kids but, no. There was not a chance he would do it. He and the kids were pretty close, so it was not because of their relationship that he nixed it. This old man was smart enough to know that something like that would change everyone's routines, and the last thing he wanted was to be in the way. Besides, he was still healthy enough to be on his own for a while.

He had five crisp hundred dollar bills in his pocket to give to the movers as a tip, if they deserved it. He'd been in that business as a young man, and knew it was no picnic. Between Irene's life insurance and his sale of the house, he had nearly two million. A small apartment with a view had attracted his attention. It was uptown, overlooking a manmade lake. A quiet and well groomed neighborhood. He had given them the deposit, and that was where he was going to end up tonight. The other thing he had in his pocket was a folded envelope. It contained five prepaid credit cards worth a thousand bucks each. He had plans for

The movers arrived within the hour. There were four reasonably burly guys in their 30's and 40's and a teenage redhaired kid who looked skinny but wiry. The kid looked a little nervous, standing there and shifting from one foot to the other. One of the guys looked at him, shook his head and said "Jimmy, let's go. I told you it's your job to start packing the boxes into the overhead. Start with the heavy stuff and use it as a base. We're gonna get the furniture padded and ready to go. Hey, where's the dolly? You should have brought it with you!" Jimmy nodded quickly and went up the ramp into the truck.

Jack spoke to the guy, saying "Don't be hard on the kid. He looks like he's trying. He'll work out for you." The guy just gave him a sidelong glance. As the afternoon went on, Jack

noticed they were aiving Jimmy quite the workout, putting him on the wrong end of kitchen appliances, heavy dressers from upstairs, and leaving him most of the boxes as

In about five hours, they pretty well had it done. Jack had made them coffees and sandwiches for a break in between. Jimmy had asked to use the washroom had just enough room to peer out of the before they went. He seemed to be gone for a while, so Jack went upstairs to check on him. Jimmy came out, and had obviously been crying. Jack said "What's up, buddy?" Jimmy sat down on a chair and said "My Mom died three weeks ago. My Dad left us two years ago. Now it's just me and two brothers and a sister. I don't know what we're gonna do. I started with these guys two weeks go, but I'm finding it hard to keep up."

Going downstairs, Jack said to the mover boss" Listen, can vou get along at the other end without this fella? He's sick and I want to drive him home. If you need someone else, get them, and I'll pay the extra." The guy grumbled a little bit and said "Well, he never told us anything, but if there's an elevator we can use, we'll be alright. Just take a little longer." Jack said "Right, I'll meet you there in half an hour."

So it was that he took Jimmy home, and met his younger siblings, who were trying to cook macaroni and wieners on a hotplate. He took an old business card out of his wallet and wrote a phone number on it, then gave Jimmy one of the hundred dollar bills and a couple of the credit cards. "Look, this will be enough to keep you going for a little while, You've got a tough road ahead, but I think you can do it. Call me and let me know how you're doing."

At his new apartment most of his stuff had gone into storage. Unneeded furniture and what not. Jack gave each of the guys their tips and thanked them. The day was finally done, and he was once again alone. He was warm and dry, and had lots of food. Well. He wouldn't be home much anyway. Irene, with her optimistic spirit and her charitable ways, had changed him a great deal. He had plans for the winter. They involved more credit cards, and the little wagon he had in the basement. It would hold a good amount of groceries.

The people sleeping with a sheet of cardboard between them and the sidewalk would do a little better this year.

would like to extend their gratitude for all the support we have received during this difficult time. There have been so many family and friends who have reached out to all of us with food, cards, letters, flowers and donations to the Fire Department in memory of Owen. It has been overwhelming.

We are so grateful for everything that In Memoriam Funeral Services did for us. Randy and his staff, especially Emma, helped to make all of the arrangements much easier and made Owen's celebration of life very special.

We would also like to thank the staff of Headwaters Health Care Centre, the amazing staff in the ICU unit at Brampton Civic Hospital, all of the members of the Orangeville Fire Department, and The Town of Orangeville, for all of their support.

OBITUARIES

MONTROY, Susan Joyce (nee Brown)

(June 27, 1960 - April 8, 2018)

It is with great sadness that we announce the passing of Susan at the Victoria General Hospital, B.C. after a courageous battle with cancer. Loving mother of Lindsay Clark. Beloved daughter of Joyce and the late Ken Brown. Dear sister of Pam (Rick) Sorge. Aunt Sue will also be greatly missed by Nicolas and Holly Sorge. She was loved by many and will be missed by all who knew her.

Susan was born in Shelburne and grew-up on the family farm in Melancthon Township. In 1983 she moved to Victoria B.C. She was a valued employee for two long-term employers. She understood the importance of a good education and in later years received a college diploma in Business Management. Susan was very proud of her oriental garden and fish pond. She had a very warm and kind heart. She was always willing to give a helping hand to those in need. Susan volunteered with the Girl Guides of Canada and the local Legion Branch. She spent many hours volunteering at a local animal rescue because of her love for animals. As per Susan's wishes, cremation has taken place and no services will be held. Memorial donations to the Canadian Cancer Society would be appreciated by the family.
