TOP TORY VISITS DUFFERIN COUNTY: Conservative Party of Canada leader Andrew Scheer was at MacMaster Buick GMC in Orangeville on Saturday (April 28) to meet local residents ahead of next year's federal election. Mr. Scheer, who is approaching his first anniversary as leader of the Tories, discussed the economy, housing market and immigration issues with area residents. For the full story, see Page A2.

Sylvia Jones predicts Tory win in June 7 vote

Written By MIKE PICKFORD

Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones officially kicked off her campaign ahead of this summer's provincial election on Saturday (April 28), promising the more than 100 people in attendance that change is coming in Ontario.

Joined by a special guest, former Federal cabinet minister Peter MacKay, the local Progressive Conservative (PC) candidate addressed the current climate of provincial politics in a short speech to welcome guests. There, she informed onlookers that a vote for blue on June 7 is a vote for a better, sustainable Ontario.

Held at Ms. Jones' new campaign office at 229 Broadway, the campaign kickoff was considered a huge success, with at least a couple of hundred area residents passing through the doors at some stage of the morning. Speaking to the Free Press following the launch, Ms. Jones intimated the real work would now begin.

"This has been a fantastic launch, stronger even than the last one," Ms. Jones said. "We have a lot of people excited to get this election process started and today's attendance proves that."

She added, "Our focus now is to ensure we get out into the community and listen. I've already heard about the need for change from lots of local residents. Our job now is to take as much information on board as possible, going door to door and engaging with the people who make up the backbone of this province."

Mr. MacKay, who served as a Member of Parliament from 1997 to 2015, holding down such roles as Minister of Justice and Attorney General, Minister of National Defence and Minister of Foreign Affairs, noted his excitement for the upcoming election. Following 15 years of Liberal rule in Ontario, Mr. MacKay, a Nova Scotia native who now lives in Toronto, says it's time for the PCs to lead the province forward into a new era.

"I think there's a best-before date on this Liberal government that has come and gone. In reality, the unbridled spending and promises of things that haven't been done for 15 years, I don't think is resonating with people. We just don't believe it any more," Mr. MacKay told the Free Press. "I think the people are looking for a government that will be transparent and be more accountable for their actions."

If nothing else, new PC leader Doug Ford certainly represents change. Following what could only be described as a stormy leadership race earlier this year, Mr. Ford came out on top, promising to bring Ontario back to its former glory. Passionate, eccentric and relatable, Mr. Ford has an uncanny ability to connect with people, says Ms. Jones.

Tory leader Scheer says Trudeau shows ‘lots of sizzle, not much steak’

Written By MIKE PICKFORD

Having led the Conservative Party of Canada now for 12 months, Andrew Scheer is hoping to do the same thing on a national scale come October 2019.

Approaching his first anniversary as Conservative leader, Mr. Scheer spent time in Orangeville last Saturday (April 28) speaking to local residents about some of the issues they feel are most important heading into the election. Sitting down with the Free Press, the man who hopes to become Canada's 24th prime minister has big ideas for a country he believes can, and should be doing much better.

“The purpose of being here today is to meet and greet as many people as I possibly can and get a feel for what they think is important ahead of next year's election,” Mr. Scheer said. “Here in Caledon and Orangeville, people brought up the carbon tax, the escalating price of fuel and concerns that costs will continue to go up more and more. We also still have a lot of people who feel burned by the Liberal government's attack on small business last year.”

That attack was led by Finance Minister Bill

Morneau who, at the time, indicated Canadian small business owners received unfair tax breaks, something he vowed to look into and, potentially, correct. It was one in a long line of Liberal gaffes that Scheer believes will steer voters back towards the Conservative party next year.

Other issues brought up by area residents included discontent over Bill C-71, the Liberal government's new gun legislation. “There is a big awareness of the fact that this bill targets law-abiding gun owners and does nothing to fight gangs and criminals in major centres like Toronto and Vancouver,” Mr. Scheer said.

And if there was discontent over Bill C-71, there was genuine anger regarding the lack of high-speed internet for rural residents across Caledon and Dufferin County. “The Liberals made a big, flashy announcement regarding high speed internet for rural residents and then there's been no follow-up since. For people here and across Canada, that's a big, big concern,” he said.

And while Mr. Scheer didn't go into too much detail regarding his platform, it was clear to see him as a man on a mission. He told this reporter his number one goal was to improve the quality of life for all Canadians, and he had some genuine ideas on how to actually do it. He spoke about how the Conservatives would boost the economy by supporting small business, take drastic action to fix a “broken” immigration system and attempt to tackle a national housing shortage that is pricing young Canadians out of the market.

Regarding immigration, Mr. Scheer stated the system needed to be “fair and compassionate” for all who want to live in Canada. “We have numerous cases right now where people are jumping to the front of the queue... It's not fair to people who had to go through the proper channels, and isn't fair for people currently going through the process.”

He condemned Prime Minister Trudeau for what he called a lack of direction and leadership regarding the 25,000 Syrian refugees that entered the country last year. Mr. Scheer noted he had recently met with Toronto Mayor John Tory, who shared that many of those refugees now find themselves in homeless shelters throughout the city.

“Mr. Trudeau had no plan to welcome those refugees, no plan to help the cities, no plan for accommodations, no plan to help these people learn the English language,” Mr. Scheer said. “I'm afraid that people are finding, with Mr. Trudeau, there's lots of sizzle but not much steak there.”

Mr. Scheer stated he would like to see an immigration system that follows due process, allowing people to apply to enter Canada under the proper channels, while providing refugee aid to individuals in “real danger”.

On the housing market, he says the “one size fits all” plan the Liberal government has rolled out in an attempt to alleviate issues in urban centres such as Toronto and Vancouver has done nothing for growing communities like Orangeville. He says the Conservatives would look for ways to help young people save money for a deposit, while working with financial institutions to make mortgages more affordable. While those two points will be priorities, the number one issue, Mr. Scheer says, is increasing the supply in popular areas.

“We need to bring more inventory to the market. I've already spoken to many provincial and municipal politicians about linking federal funds with incentives around developing new units, getting more supply on the market,” Mr. Scheer said. “That has to be part of the conversation. It's a little early to come out with specifics, but the intention is we can't continue to have a system where it takes years and years and years to get new units onto the market, otherwise we'll continue to see home-ownership being out of the reach of more and more Canadians.”

Touching on national defence, Mr. Scheer said he has already committed to spending two percent of the GDP on the Canadian military. He criticized the Liberal's continued uncertainty over purchasing new jets for the air force and condemned Mr. Trudeau for simply following the United Nation's recommendations for overseas deployment.

“We believe that Canada's deployment should be based on a set of criteria that defends Canada's national interests. The Liberals just launched a mission in Mali because the UN told them that was what the priority was,” Mr. Scheer said. “I don't believe the UN should be dictating our foreign policy or our defence policy.”

As his national tour continues, Mr. Scheer said he will be sharing his platform with Canadians across the country, seeking to reassure them that a brighter future is just around the corner.

“As we develop specific policies in general, you can look forward to a government that will put people first. We need to stop pushing costs for today's political spending on future generations of Canadians. It's not fair – you wouldn't do it to your kids, your parents wouldn't do it to you,” Mr. Scheer said.

“My parents aren't leaving me with big debts and I hope to leave my kids with more than just credit card bills. It's not fair to have the government doing this to our kids. This is a practice that desperately needs to end.”

“ We need to stop pushing costs for today's political spending on future generations of Canadians.”

Sylvia Jones predicts Tory win in June 7 provincial vote

"I've seen Doug working all over the province... He connects with people and he's able to bring that Progressive Conservative message to a group of voters who traditionally wouldn't usually consider us, which is really important as we seek to form a majority government," Ms. Jones said.

Importantly for Dufferin-Caledon, Mr. Ford has committed to completing the environmental assessment for the GTA West corridor project. Back in February, following years of investigative work and millions of tax dollars spent, the Ontario government cancelled the project, citing an expert panel's recommendation that a proposed 400-series highway in the GTA West corridor is not the best way to address changing transportation needs.

Ms. Jones has been lobbying hard for that particular initiative for several years, stating it would be "massive" for Dufferin-Caledon. While Ms. Jones didn't go into specifics regarding her platform, she indicated there is much to consider heading into the election.

"I'm going to keep talking about the same things I've been talking about down at Queens Park, whether they be transportation issues, health care issues or long-term care issues," Ms. Jones said. "These are all things I've talked about as a member of the Opposition, we're going to keep talking about them during this campaign, the difference is we're also going to be offering solutions that will make a difference to the people of Ontario."

Ms. Jones will face competition from at least four other candidates heading into the June 7 vote. Local beef farmer Bob Gordani-er will represent the Liberal Party, while Orangeville business owner Laura Campbell is standing for the Green Party. Jeff Harris is a Libertarian candidate, while Andrew Nowell is representing the Trillium Party. As of press time, there is no declared NDP candidate.

The Dufferin Board of Trade announced last week that it would host two all-candidate forums ahead of the election. The first will be held at the Shelburne Legion on Tuesday, May 15 from 6:30 to 9 p.m., with a second event at Orangeville District Secondary School on Thursday, May 24, also from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

The forums will begin with a half-hour 'meet and greet' with the candidates, before a town-hall format question-and-answer period. Residents are asked to submit questions ahead of time for consideration.

Schools marking Catholic Education Week

Schools and parishes across the Dufferin-Peel Catholic District School Board will host many special events and activities next week, as students, staff, and the community celebrate Catholic Education Week.

"This year's theme for Catholic Education Week is Renewing the Promise - our promise, as a Catholic community, to keep Catholic faith traditions alive in our Catholic schools," the school board said in a news release. "Many schools will host events and activities reflective of this theme, including: plays, art displays, celebratory Masses, fundraisers, motivational speakers, and much more."

"This is a very special week for our students and staff. It is an opportunity to reflect on the importance of faith in our lives, and the role it plays in education," said Marianne Mazzorato, Director of Education. "We invite all members of our community, especially our parents/guardians and families, to participate in the events and activities planned for their school communities throughout the week."

To kick-off Catholic Education Week, Dufferin-Peel hosted a Catholic Youth Symposium on Wednesday (May 2). Supported by activities and resources provided by the Archdiocese of Toronto's Office of Catholic Youth, students will continue the dialogue that began last fall when they met with Bishop John Boissonneau and Bishop Robert Kasun regarding Pope Francis' Fall 2018 Synod on "Young People, the Faith and Vocational Discernment". Over 200 secondary students took part in the event at the St. Kateri Tekakwitha Catholic Learning Centre.

The Board is running a social media campaign on Twitter called #MyCatholicEducation from April 30 to May 11. Students, staff, parents and alumni are asked to reflect on "What does Catholic education mean to you?" or "How has your Catholic education helped to shape the person you are today?" and share their thoughts through tweets and pictures using the hashtag #MyCatholicEducation.

Security - at what cost?

It was only a few days after the tragedy in Toronto where a lone nutjob used a van as a weapon that calls came out for more security on city streets.

One person on a radio station suggested sidewalk and street barriers like they have in her native Israel.

However, this isn't Israel, we are not at war, have no enemies at our borders, and the actions of a single person should not shake us into a new era of added security.

There's an old adage that locks are only for honest people.

An honest person will reach for a doorknob, find it locked, and continue on realizing they aren't supposed to enter that room. A dishonest person will find a way to get past that lock.

It's the same thing with people who commit acts of atrocity. You can barricade the streets but a person intent on doing damage will find another way.

We already have security in place. Police departments enforce existing laws and do what they can to prevent other crimes from happening. The RCMP provides counter-terrorism and domestic security functions. CSIS provides intelligence on national security both within the country and abroad.

For the most part they do a pretty job of keeping on top of different threats.

All of these agencies will most likely tell you that the worst kind of threat comes from the lone-nut type of person who has a plan in the head and tells no one else about it. Some things just can't be stopped.

Some argue that 'added security' will protect the public – but from what?

At what point does security take over your life and you become a prisoner?

After the events of September 11, 2001, precautions were taken to an extreme level. Maybe at the time it was needed for a while to ensure there was no additional threat, but common sense went completely out the window.

I know an 80-year-old grandmother who boarded a flight from Florida after a vacation and had a nail clipper confiscated because it was a 'weapon.'

Common sense tells you an octogenarian carrying a nail clipper is a threat to no one, but at the time, rules were rules.

BRIAN LOCKHART
FROM THE SECOND ROW

A few years ago I was called for jury duty. When I entered the courthouse in Barrie there was a metal detector and armed guards. After emptying my pockets and putting my keys and coins on a tray before going through the metal detector, the officer pointed to a small penknife attached to my key chain and said it was a weapon.

The knife had a blade of maybe one inch.

I felt like pointing out that it was less dangerous than any of the pens or pencils in the courthouse offices or that the empty chair in the hallway would do more damage in the hands of a dangerous person than my tiny little knife, but of course I just complied and disposed of the offending weaponry.

Freedom is a fragile thing. Your freedom to move about, walk down a city street, go for a drive in the country, or play a round of golf when you feel like it, shouldn't be taken for granted.

Added security, when taken to the tenth degree, will limit those freedoms you now consider a normal part of life. To give that up because one person committed an act of terror would be surrendering to that terror.

Any government that tries to legislate any type of increased 'security' in the guise of protecting its citizens should be considered more a threat on your freedom rather than a security measure. Thankfully, this has not been suggested at any government level and I certainly hope it isn't even being considered.

Security means protection from a threat. Armed guards randomly stopping people on the streets is not security, it's a police state.

Our current level of national and local security is working fine.

This act of insanity in Toronto was perpetrated by single individual for reasons not really yet known, and probably never will be. Even this nutjob will not be able to explain his actions with any reasonable clarity.

The best security is common sense – not reactionary solutions to a temporary problem.

Could this be 1934 all over again?

EDITORIAL

THE WRIT HASN'T BEEN dropped, but for all intents and purposes the 2018 Ontario election campaign is under way, and we're facing a five-week deluge of pledges and criticisms, with two parties decrying the populism they see in the leading party's leader.

For nearly all of the province's 14 million residents, Doug Ford is the only party leader they've ever heard described as a populist, a sort of northern version of Donald Trump.

We don't know whether such attacks are fair or reasonable, but Progressive Conservative campaign placards proclaiming Mr. Ford as "for the people," surely do have a populist ring about them.

However, Mr. Ford isn't the first populist leader of an Ontario party; far from it. In 1934, Mitch Hepburn used a combination of populism and public antipathy toward the governing Conservatives to score a huge electoral victory.

Going into that June election, the government of George S. Henry had held 90 of the Legislature's 112 seats, but a redistribution eliminated 22 of the seats, including the one for Dufferin. When the votes were counted, the Tories were left with just 17 seats, while the Hepburn Liberals and supporters from the dying Progressive and United Farmers of Ontario parties collectively had 70 of the surviving 90 ridings.

Mr. Hepburn, who before entering politics worked as an accountant and farmer in the St. Thomas area, was a Liberal MP before winning the provincial party leadership in 1930. A Wikipedia biography says of him: "Hepburn represented a type of agrarian democracy that detested Toryism and valued oratory. He once saw a pile of manure situated in a village square, and proceeded to jump on top of it to give a speech, apologizing to the crowd for speaking from a Tory platform. He also used the same line when standing on a manure spreader, only to have a heckler shout, "Well, wind 'er up Mitch, because she's never carried a bigger load!"

On his death, the Toronto Star observed: "It was in the 1934 election campaign that Mr. Hepburn's gift of oratory first impinged on the province at large. He had a free and easy platform manner, his customary attitude being hands plunged in side coat pockets while he wandered about the platform releasing an unaltered flow of barbed-wire eloquence that no other political speaker could match in rapidity and certainly not in deadliness. He never consulted a note, never appeared to prepare a speech in advance, and delivered an array of astounding facts and figures with such an air of assurance that his audience seldom thought to question them."

And from the Canadian Encyclopedia: "Confident and affable, 'Mitch' was a popular farmer ... His speeches on behalf of Ontario farmers and for freer trade were noted more for their wit than for economic insight. ... In office, Hepburn implemented a number of populist measures – the auction of government limousines and the closing of the lieutenant-governor's residence. He cancelled power contracts with four Québec companies, tried to bring order to provincial finances, improved labour legislation and aided the iron-ore industry."

However, before long his romance with the electorate began to fade, and his wartime battles with Liberal prime minister Mackenzie King finally led to his resignation as party leader and the Liberals' disastrous loss in the 1943 election that ushered in 43 years of Conservative governments.

Today, there seems no doubt that the Liberals will suffer a similar fate in this election, thanks in part to Mr. Ford's populism. But if recent polls are an accurate measure of the public mood, the Progressive Conservatives will emerge on June 7 with a commanding majority of the 124 seats only because half the electorate is evenly divided between the Liberals and New Democrats, two 'centre-left' parties that have remarkably similar platforms.

It happened today

In this week's offering, we take a look back through history and note some of the interesting happenings from May 3 over the years.

752- Mayan King Bird Jaguar IV of Yaxchilan in modern-day Chiapas, Mexico, assumes the throne.

1469- Niccolò Machiavelli was born in Florence, Italy, and is often called the father of modern political science, famous for his Renaissance philosophy.

1791- The Constitution of May 3 (the first modern constitution in Europe) is proclaimed by the Sejm of Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth.

1802- Washington, D.C. is incorporated as a city.

1903- American singer and actor Bing Crosby is born.

1915- John McCrae writes the poem "In Flanders Fields" becoming one of the most popular war poems, synonymous with the red poppy and the war.

1936- Joe DiMaggio makes his baseball debut with the New York Yankees.

1937- Margaret Mitchell wins the Pulitzer Prize for her novel "Gone With the Wind" set in the American Civil War and Reconstruction Era, later adapted into a film starring Clarke Gable and Vivian Leigh.

1946- The Japan War Crimes Trials begin, conducting trials for military and government officials of committing war crimes and crimes against humanity during World War II. Seven are sentenced to death including General and Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo, and Iwane Matsui (who organized the Rape of Nanking). 16 others are sentenced to life imprisonment.

1979- Margaret Thatcher wins the general election, becoming Great Britain's first female prime minister. Known for her uncompromising politics and leadership style, she was nicknamed the "Iron Lady."

1999- The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed above 11,000 for the first time.

2016- 88,000 people are evacuated from their homes in Fort McMurray Alberta, Canada. The wildfire ripped through the community, destroying approximately 2,400 homes and buildings.

Shelburne Police issue warning about discarded needles

The Shelburne Police Service is warning the public to watch out for discarded needles. The Shelburne Police Service has received a number of calls from the public regarding needles being discarded carelessly in public areas and parks. Not only can this activity be an indicator of intravenous drug use in the community, but the discarded needles can pose a health risk to the public if not handled and discarded properly.

Shelburne Police ask that if needles or syringes are found that you call them at (519)925-3312 x1 for proper and safe disposal. Please do not try to pick these needles up yourself. The Shelburne Police also ask that you speak to your children about this problem and teach them never to touch a needle or syringe that they may find. If a child finds a needle or syringe please teach them to tell an adult.

If anyone's skin is pierced with a discarded needle, they are strongly encouraged to seek medical attention right away.

If you have any information regarding this, or any other matter, please call the Shelburne Police Service at (519)925-3312 x1 or Crime stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS.

Three males charged in convenience store robbery

Three teen-aged males have been arrested and are facing several criminal charges in connection to an armed robbery Tuesday of last week at an Orangeville convenience store.

On Tuesday April 17, at about 6:00 a.m., three males entered First Street Variety, at 7 First Street, which had just opened for business. The males approached the counter and demanded the contents of the cash register from the female employee, one of the suspects brandishing a firearm. The suspects made off with an undisclosed amount of cash, cigarettes and miscellaneous items. The employee was not injured.

On Wednesday April 18, at about 2:10 a.m., three men were apprehended by Peel Regional Police as they attempted to flee in a stolen vehicle.

As a result of the investigation, the trio, whose identities are protected under the Youth Criminal Justice Act, were arrested and taken into custody.

Each of the three accused are facing several criminal charges including robbery using a firearm, wearing a disguise with intent to commit an indictable offence and possession of property obtained by crime.

The accused were all held in custody in Brampton pending bail hearings on charges by Peel Regional Police.

On Wednesday, April 25, two of the accused were transported to Orangeville Courthouse where they were formally charged and on Friday, April 27, the third male was also transported to Orangeville Courthouse and formally charged.

All three have been held in custody pending bail hearings regarding the allegations.

Guns, ammunition turned over to Orangeville police

The Orangeville Police Service has completed its annual Firearms and Prohibited Weapons Amnesty program that ran from April 1 to 30.

As a result of the program, police received four firearms and various types of ammunition over the month-long initiative. The firearms surrendered included a .22-caliber handgun, a .22-caliber rifle and two 12 gauge shotguns.

The goal of the annual program is to increase safety by reducing the number of unwanted or illegally owned firearms, prohibited weapons and ammunition in our community. Having such items turned in through the program reduces the likelihood of unwanted firearms and weapons falling into the hands of criminals from break-ins and thefts, or into the hands of curious youth.

"We are pleased that this annual initiative continues to achieve the intended goal. We thank the members of the public for supporting this program and assisting our police service to help make Orangeville a safer community", said Police Chief Wayne Kalinski.

Officers investigating after car drives into Caledon home

Officers from the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) Caledon Detachment responded to a report of a vehicle driving into a house in Caledon East.

On Friday, April 27, 2018 at approximately 2:20 p.m. a vehicle was traveling on Marion Street approaching Larry Street. For unknown reasons the vehicle lost control, proceeded through the intersection where it struck a house and went through the garage. The vehicle ended up in the back yard of the house.

Officers arrived at the scene and quickly removed the driver and passenger who were unable to exit the vehicle.

Officers evacuated the surrounding residences due to a potential gas leak at the scene.

Peel Regional Paramedics, Caledon Fire Services and Enbridge Gas officials attended the scene.

The driver and occupant of the vehicle were not injured in the collision. There was a resident in the house at the time of the collision but they were not injured.

Occupants in the surrounding houses were allowed to return to their homes at approximately 3:10 p.m.

Officers will be investigating if the driver was suffering from a medical emergency at the time of the collision.

Shelburne Police and Dominos Pizza join forces for Special Olympics

Written By MARNI WALSH

On Monday, April 30th, Shelburne Police Services joined forces with Dominos Pizza in Shelburne to raise funds for the Shelburne Police Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics Ontario. A total of $1750 was raised when Dominos Pizza generously donated 50% of all dinner rush pizza sales towards the cause.

The fundraiser was initiated by PC Jeff McLean of the Shelburne Police Service and Rishi Kakar the owner of Dominos Pizza, as a joint venture to raise money for the Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics Ontario.

P.C. Jennifer Roach of the Shelburne Police Service says that “since the Shelburne Police Service reignited the Special Olympics Torch Run in 2011, over $120,000 has been raised locally for the Special Olympics.”

Constable Jeff McLean is the officer who coordinates all fundraising efforts for the SPS Torch Run. “I am very proud of Constable McLean’s efforts and the amazing support we get from our community,” said Chief Moore earlier this year. “We take great pride in being able to provide opportunities for athletes with intellectual disabilities.”

Both PC McLean and Chief Moore were at Dominos Monday night, preparing and serving delicious, fresh pizza for customers supporting the cause.

Shelburne Police Service has been involved with the Ontario Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics for several years. Last year they raised approximately $20,000 and this winter they hosted the Polar Plunge during “Shelbrrrr Fest” as a way of raising money towards the 2018 Torch Run.

All the money raised from the event goes toward assisting Special Olympics athletes attain their goals and compete in the Special Olympics. PC Roach says, “Chief Kent Moore and PC McLean would like to thank the community for their support and Dominos Pizza for their generosity in making this event such a success.”

The Heritage Music Festival - the Canadian Open Fiddle Championships

Written By CONSTANCE SCRAFIELD

The great Canadian Open Old Time Fiddle Championship is now a part of the Heritage Music Festival in Shelburne. Still the same weekend and the venue but bigger and with a fresh face to its format.

This will be its 68th year and never doubt that it constitutes an very important place on the calendar of Canada’s musical life. There was some question whether the fiddle was an instrument waning in popularity.

On the contrary, so Festival Chair, Bobbi Ferguson, was clear to say, “There’s a revitalization. A lot of fiddlers are getting more people in playing. A truckload of schools in Toronto are putting out fiddle students.”

The champion fiddlers themselves are the ones very concerned that this premier fiddle competition in Shelburne not only survives but is re-invigorated for future generations.

Said Ms Ferguson, “Linsey Beckett and her brother, Tyler, along with Scott Woods, came to the office. Scott is doing a tour of 50 shows and promoting the festival to other fiddle players and musicians. Louis Schryer, a Canadian Champion – they have banded together to spread the word that may attract many new competitors to come, which would be wonderful. Today there are many new fiddlers registered.”

She began to sum up the scheduling for the Heritage Music Festival: “On Wednesday, August 8,” she said, “is the Country Jamboree, starting in the evening at 7:00pm.”

This sets the weekend up with a far reaching jamming session.

Ms Ferguson explained: “Local people come to jam – this is always really successful. There’s square dancing, and singing. People bring their instruments to play. It’s a lot of fun.”

Thursday, August 9, the excitement begins with a return engagement of the Beckett family, Linsey and Tyler Beckett, opening at 7:30 pm. Back to the festival by popular demand since their terrific concerts in 2014 and 2015 at the show, the Beckett siblings are bringing their fulsome range of fiddle music, from “Western Swing to Bluegrass.”

There will be “exhilarating step dancing” and all the fun that comes with the best of fiddle music is the meat and potatoes of this concert. The show will rock with traditional fiddling and special guests. Four generations of fiddlers in the Beckett Family back to their great grandfather, is a musical tradition worth celebrating.

The Trews with the Pop Machine are the headliners rock band on Friday, August 10.

Ms Ferguson was delighted to tell the Free Press, “There’s a lot of buzz about that. We’re expecting a crowd of about a thousand people.”

Needing no introduction, the Trews have done a thousand concerts world wide during their ten years of being one of Canada’s most successful rock band. While a great many of their appearances are their own concerts, they have also played with such other big names as the Rolling Stones, KISS, Guns ‘n’

Roses and Bruce Springsteen. Along with numerous other awards, the quartet has won 17 Top Ten Rock radio singles, a CIMA Road Gold Award and several JUNO Award nominations.

This concert begins at 7:30 pm.

Saturday, August 10 is given over the Canadian Open Old Time Fiddle Championships.

Beginning at 10:00 am at the Centre Dufferin Recreation Complex (Shelburne Arena), with the playdowns, with the “Young and the Young at Heart”, ages nine and under, 10 to 12 and 56 and over classes. These are followed by the remaining classes which are Gospel, Group, Novelty, Bluegrass and the Open Class.

Shelburne will treated to a grand Fiddle Parade and, in the afternoon, there will be entertainment galore with Bands and Brews at the Fiddle Park, an open air market and a pork BBQ.

Come the evening at 6:30 pm, are the “crowning” of the Canadian Open Champion and the Open Junior Champion. Multiple Canadian Old Time Fiddle Champion, Louis Schryer and the judges’ showcase will keep the entertainment hopping.

Sunday, August 11, Ms Ferguson informed us, “There is a huge non-denominational church service at which the Barrel Boys provide the music. A thousand people come to it.”

In supporting the Heritage Music Festival, you are by extension also supporting the very long list of charities to which the proceeds of the festival go, including Music for Memories, the digital imaging department at Headwaters Health Care Centre and Shelburne Girl Guides and Boy Scouts to mention just a few.

The Heritage Music Festival and Canadian Open Fiddle Championship is sponsored by the Rotary Club.

More than 300 run in New Tecumseth 5k and half marathon

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

It was a good day for a long distance run – cool and crisp – when over 300 long distance runners took part in the New Tecumseth 5K and Half Marathon run in support of Stevenson Memorial Hospital in Alliston on Sunday, April 29.

The event attracted runners from around the region including quite a few from Shelburne and the surrounding area who came out for the challenge.

Shelburne resident Alex Heck ran the half-marathon from Tottenham to Alliston. “I’m in a full marathon next week in Toronto,” she said. “So this is part of the training.”

The 5K route wound through the streets of Alliston while the half-marathon got started at the Community Centre in Tottenham and made its way north to Alliston.

Both races finished at PPG Park in Alliston.

The run was organized by a group of volunteers to help raise funds for the Stevenson Memorial Hospital $30 million redevelopment campaign.

“I’m the runner director and we have seven other volunteers that helped organize,” said race organizer Kara Harris.

“We’ve done other races but this is the first one in New Tec. It’s supporting the hospital. The proceeds from our event go to the Stevenson Memorial Hospital Foundation.”

The organizers have held smaller events in the town. In addition to Ms. Harris, organizers include Charlene McNmara, Nicole Myatt, Connie Clark, Lise Waltenbury, Brenda MacNeil, and Nicole Pavlovic, and Tracy Ross.

“We’ve had a few other smaller events in the town. We are 100 per cent volunteer. Our mandate has always been to give back to local charities and families in our community. We did a run a few years ago and that money went to the hospital. After that event we realized how important it was that the hospital have a run that is supported by the community. The town needs it, the community needs it, and the hospital needs it too,” Harris said. “I have my own connection with the hospital so I have a real passion for this. The half marathon started in Tottenham and ended here (PPG Park). It’s 21.1 kilometres. The 5K started here in the park and ended here. Both routes go past the hospital. We had a total of 333 runners. It is our goal to make this an annual event. We’ve already started

Glenbrook Elementary students walk for water

Written By MARNI WALSH

On April 26th, students from Glenbrook Elementary School in Shelburne participated in a Me2We Water Walk. The students surpassed their goal of raising $300 to donate towards clean drinking water in developing countries.

Grade Six teacher Aynsley Whitehouse says Glenbrook School has been involved with the Me2We movement since the school opened in 2013. "The students are very involved in a variety of local and global initiatives with Me2We," says Ms. Whitehouse. "One of the pillars that Me2We focuses on is the water pillar. During research, students found out that women and young girls walk hours to collect clean water every single day."

Me2We is a "Free the Children" initiative started by Canadians Craig and Mark Kielburger of Thornhill, Ontario when they themselves were still children. Twenty years later, it is a world wide movement that helps free children and families from poverty and exploitation in developing countries. Just $25 through their organization will give one person clean water for life. This means Glenbrook students raised enough for 10 people to receive clean drinking water for life.

The "Free the Children" vision includes empowering youth and connecting them to global and third world issues. As such, they have partnered with schools to "inspire young change-makers within the classroom."

"Over the years," says Craig Kielburger on his site, "We've discovered that it's far more important to reach as many people as possible—especially youth—and empower them with the knowledge that it's not up to anyone else, it's up to them to make a difference."

Ms. Whitehouse says Me2We asserts in their program that "with access to clean water, families are able to have their girls attend school, watch their crops flourish at home and improve their personal health. Children are especially at risk for water-related diseases, and with better access to clean water school attendance rates increase—expanding the opportunities in children's lives."

Ice River Springs in Shelburne helped out with the water event by donating jugs of water for the children to carry for the walk, and individual bottles of water for every student after the walk. Students walked around the school carrying the heavy jugs "to achieve compassion and empathy" says Ms. Whitehouse, for women and young girls who must journey to water every day in order to survive. "By putting themselves in their shoes for a short period of time, they will realize what they go through every single day, and not to take clean water for granted," she says.

Although the whole school was involved in Thursday's event, Ms. Whitehouse says their Me2We group is composed of students from grades six to eight. "We currently have around 20 students in our group," she says. "They have made presentations to the school, gone around to classes to discuss the water walk in further detail, and made announcements and posters to display." Tara McCabe who works with students at the Glenbrook Me2We group was also in charge of the water walk at Hyland Heights on April 30.

With 663 million people around the world without access to safe drinking water, educational initiatives such as Me2We bring into focus the importance of water as a basic human right, not a luxury, or a commodity – key principles for a young generation that may well be faced with critical decisions on protecting source water, both at home and abroad, in the future.

Christian Perspectives: Some boundaries revisited

Two and a half years ago, my daughter and son-in-law, along with their toddler, moved in with us. The housing market being what it is, we wanted to help them save money to purchase a home. Since then, another little boy joined their family and at the beginning of June, they will move to the home they have purchased.

When they were preparing to move in with us, I looked around my home with new eyes. If a toddler was coming to live with us, I knew I would have to do some baby proofing. And one of the first things I did was install a strong baby gate at the top of the stairs to the second story. It was the kind that an adult could easily open with the push of a button, but it would not yield to baby hands.

At the time, I wrote in my blog:

As I was in my bedroom, I noticed how happy he was, running around upstairs. In the past, this was a forbidden activity. Before we had the gate the stairs were blocked at the bottom and he couldn't come up without an adult. And if he was upstairs he was in a room with the door closed.

But once the baby gate was installed, "...there I was, making my bed, while he toddled around, exploring spaces he had never really seen before."

I noted at the time that there was beauty in boundaries. He had greater freedom with a gate in place.

The boundary lines have fallen for me in pleasant places; I have a goodly heritage."

Psalms 16:6 (NRSV)

The spiritual implications did not escape me. God has put boundaries in my life. Because God knows my heart and the things that would tempt me to stray, there are gates, fences and guideposts place along the way. When I accept that God knows what is best and I incorporate these "boundaries" into my life, I experience the freedom that comes from living within the grace of God.

Now, unlike my grandsons, I can hop the gate, jump the fence and ignore the guidance that comes through God's word, the counsel of wise people and my own history with the Lord. However when I am outside of the safe places that God offers I don't experience abundant joy.

Just recently, we have started to leave the gate open during the day. My grandson is old enough to go up and down the stairs by himself. As he has matured, we have been able to trust him with more.

For this reason, since the day we heard it, we have not ceased praying for you and asking that you may be filled with the knowledge of God's will in all spiritual wisdom and understanding, so that you may lead lives worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing to him, as you bear fruit in every good work and as you grow in the knowledge of God.

Colossians 1:9-10 (NRSV)

In the Christian walk, we may find that God moves the boundaries a little. There are boundaries I used to have in my life. As I have matured spiritually, I realize they are no longer in place. But I still rely on the Spirit of God to open the gate in the right time and guide me in wisdom and understanding.

My final observation relates to the baby gate at night. The adults in my home have taken the responsibility of the gate very seriously. Even though it can now be open during the day, we still need to close it when darkness falls. It is habit for the last person to come to bed to ensure that it is well latched. We do not need it but we will not use our freedom to put a little boy at risk.

"But take care that this liberty of yours does not somehow become a stumbling block to the weak." 1 Corinthians 8:9 (NRSV)

In our interactions with others, we need to respect that they might have different boundaries than us. What God might set in place for their safety might not look the same as what is set in our lives. God asks us not to use our freedom to put others at risk.

Boundaries. You can cherish them or chafe against them. When we choose the former we open ourselves up to all the possibilities of freedom.

That might seem like an oxymoron. But it a wonderful truth.

Long-time Shelburne resident celebrates her 100th birthday

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

Friends, family, and staff, gathered at the Shelburne residence to celebrate quite a milestone.

Resident, Phyllis Montague celebrated her 100th birthday among a crowd of well wishers.

Born in England in 1918, she made a point of saying she born during the last year of the First World War.

As a young woman, she had the experience and despair of living through the London Blitz while her husband Fred was serving in the British army.

"I had my own place and I was bombed out during the war. I wasn't there at the time, fortunately," she said. "I had two children during the war and I decided to take them out of London and took them to a nursery in the country. When I came back I went straight to the shelter. My mother asked if I had been home yet, and when I said 'no', she said there was no home left. While I was away my house had been bombed."

When her husband returned from the war five years later, they had their third child in 1947.

Unfortunately the destruction in London during the war caused them to think about new options for raising their children and the wondered if Canada would hold promise for their future.

"Fred's brother came here first because he wanted to find out if there was something better for us. He found it was a nice place to be and when he came back to see us he said it was the place to go."

Fred moved to Toronto and established himself in 1954.

Both Phyllis and Fred got jobs working at the old Simpsons department store.

She then got a job working for a construction company as a bookkeeper – a job she held for 20 years.

After retiring, she and Fred decided to do some travelling.

"The girls had grown up and we started travelling. We went all over this country. From east to west and north. We went down south to Florida and places like that. When we came back we had a little home on the 11th Line (near Shelburne).

Phyllis and Fred were married for 73 years. He passed away in 2012.

Phyllis finally decided to move into a retirement home when she was 82 years old have developing some health problems.

SPECIAL CENTENARY: Surrounded by friends and staff at the Shelburne Residence, Phyllis Montague celebrates her 100th birthday. Born in England, she moved to Canada in 1954 and lived in Toronto before moving to Shelburne.

Still lucid and remembering the details of her life, Phyllis greeted visitors in the main hall of the Residence and celebrated with a cake and the best wishes of those in attendance.

Shelburne Farmer's Market makes long awaited return May 24

Written By MARNI WALSH

There is lots of excitement around the opening of the Shelburne Farmers' Market (SFM) on May 24th. Jennifer Crewson manager of the popular Thursday event on First Street in Shelburne says, "this year we are featuring a number of new vendors such as Mulmur Hills Honey and Miner's Maple Product, but are also pleased to welcome back some of our favourites such as Shine Baking Co and Petals Flower Farm. She says the Farmers' Market is also happy to bring back Community Kids, Face Painting by Sohayla Smith and Troupe-Adore, and Compost Day.

This year's SFM Committee has expanded with the growing event to include: Jennifer Crewson as Market Manager, Rosie Cornelius as Vendor Manager, Alexandra Georgakopoulos as Marketing and Media Coordinator, Izabela Busby as the Community Table Coordinator, Rebecca Landman as Secretary, Joey Lemieux as Market Day Set-Up Coordinator, and Brian Besley as the SFM Treasurer.

New for 2018, the organizers are introducing the "Community Table" which will give different community organizations a space to be featured at the market. Not-for-profit organizations, small businesses, or organizations may book the booth for a one or two time use to gain exposure, promote events - or for non profits - to raise funds. In turn, the community will learn more about local events, organizations, businesses and fundraisers happening within the community.

The Community Table will also give new vendors an opportunity to test their product out at SFM without having to commit to an entire market season. Jennifer Crewson says, "We are really hoping this will enrich our Market and bring more people out on Thursdays.

As a great add on idea, organizers say Healthy Cravings Holistic Kitchen at 155 Main Street in Shelburne will remain open on Thursday evenings. This allows Market goers to grab a coffee, smoothie or sandwich before, or after, attending the Market which runs from 3 pm – 7pm every week of the growing season.

Once again this year, local and area vendors will be selling a wide variety of fresh produce, ranging from in-season fruits, vegetables, grass-fed meats, organic produce, and lots of delicious, fresh baked goods. Local artisans will be showing their beautiful wood-craft decor and there will be a bounty of flower bouquets for sale.

The dozen or more new vendors will be featuring handmade and natural bath products, body butters and soaps, honey based cocktail syrups, flower art, raw pet foods and more.

The Shelburne Farmers' Market will run until October 4th - come rain or shine. With free activities for kids, and Trinity United Church washrooms open to the public right at the corner of Owen Sound and First Street, the market is shaping up once again as a great place for the entire family to spend a Thursday afternoon.
