PREPARE FOR MOTHER'S DAY: Students from Centre Dufferin District High School collected and delivered more than 500 bags of groceries to Shepherd's Cupboard Food Bank on Tuesday (Oct. 1). The annual drive has been running for more than a decade at the local school and sees students from Grades 9 through 12 participate. It's estimated that more than 5,000 pounds of food was collected for the local food bank through this year's efforts. For the full story, see Page 2.

'Be-U-tiful' Shelburne showcases local businesses

Written By MARNI WALSH

The upcoming Be-U-tiful Shelburne fashion show involves several "local business partners showcasing their latest talents and offerings," says AJ Cavey, owner of Cobwebs & Caviar.

Ms. Cavey invites guests to be entertained and inspired next Monday (Oct. 7) at the Dufferin Public House.

This will be Ms. Cavey's first time presenting a fashion show in Shelburne.

"We did a fashion show as requested by the Women's Federation for their Women's Day Event last fall," she says. "We had a great time and a fabulous response. They choose to showcase different businesses every year, so we felt we needed to do our own this year."

The owner of the popular fashion and quilting store on Main Street Shelburne, told the Free Press, "I am super excited and feeling very blessed with the response. The tickets are almost sold out. The show will be open late after the show as well, and we hope to see lots of people getting to know Cobwebs and Caviar and our local businesses better."

The fashion show is geared for local ladies who "appreciate the value of feeling beautiful... inside and out," says Ms. Cavey. "Beauty comes from confidence and health and well-being. We want to showcase and celebrate that," she says.

Half of the proceeds raised through the sale of each ticket sold will be donated to Shelburne's Shepherd's Cupboard Food Bank.

"Thanksgiving is right around the corner," says Ms. Cavey. "We feel very fortunate to be able to feed our family without worry and we wanted to help the food bank help others do the same. I know that the perishables are the most needed so funds for those seemed more fitting."

The show has a limited number of tickets due to seating, and with most tickets sold, at this point, the event is donating close to $500.

Changes Hair Salon and Glamour on the Go will be doing the hair and makeup for the fashion models Monday night. The models will be showcasing a sampling of Cobwebs & Caviar's clothing lines, the Wool & Silk Company's artistic wool creations, and Petals flower farm's wearable floral art. In addition, Blavish will be represented by some of their customers modelling the store's hair extensions.

Fresh Variety will be helping to create a festive environment at the show with fall vegetation and arrangements. A number of local businesses are donating door prizes, including Being in Balance, Oasis Tanning, Beyond the Gate, Healthy Cravings & DDS Dentistry (Dr Ben Van Galen & Dr Asaph,) with more still to be announced.

The doors to Be-U-tiful Shelburne will open at 6 p.m. on Oct. 7 with the show starting at 7 p.m.

"We want to encourage people to go early and eat if they wish to turn it into a girls' night out," says Ms. Cavey.

Tickets are $15 each, with half donated to the Shepherd's Food Bank. Tickets include a glass of champagne and a Be-u-tiful Bag. This is a closed event at The Dufferin Public House at 214 Main Street East in Shelburne.

Tickets are available at Cobwebs & Caviar and other local businesses - seating is limited.

CDDHS students donate 5,000 pounds of food to Shepherd's Cupboard

Written By PETER RICHARDSON

On Tuesday morning (Oct. 1), the main lobby of the Centre Dufferin District High School (CDDHS) was turned into a one-of-a-kind grocery store, as the annual CDDHS Food Drive in support of the Shepherd's Cupboard Food Bank, took centre stage.

Students prepared to deliver some 500 bags of groceries that had been collected from homes in the community the previous day. The annual drive has been in existence for over 10 years and this year was co-ordinated by teachers, Julie Senese and Matt

Rush. The students involved, many of whom are members of CDDHS student council, came from all grades, 9 through 12 and had distributed the brown paper collection bags, throughout Town, the previous week, before collecting them on Monday.

This year, the drive collected over 500 bags of food and other staples for the Food Bank, totalling an estimated total of 5,000 pounds of food or more!

According to volunteer co-ordinator Ardieth Dunlop, this drive is the largest of the year for Shepherd's Cupboard and is highly anticipated, by the Food Bank, to replenish the supplies after the summer months. This year is perhaps the largest amount ever collected by the CDDHS students.

Although the students are awarded Community Service hours for efforts outside of school hours, the majority of the collection hours are purely volunteer. Their only reward being the satisfaction of helping a worthy cause.

Some 2,000 paper bags were distributed this year with the return being well above average for an event of this kind. Shelburne's Rotary Club volunteers to transport the bags, from the high school to the Food Bank, located at the Mel Lloyd Centre.

This year, the number of bags was so large, that a passer-by, Mr. John Oorebeek was even persuaded to donate his time and pick-up

DOING THEIR PART: Dozens of students assisted with dropping off and carting food donations to Shepherd's Cupboard Food Bank in Shelburne on Tuesday (Oct. 1). A part of the school's annual food drive, students gathered more than 500 bags containing approximately 5,000 pounds of food to the local food bank.

truck to the cause, to make the delivery in a single trip possible.

In total, five vehicles, including two pickups, were loaded to overflowing with bags!

Once at the Mel Lloyd Centre, the bags were unloaded and carried down the stairway to the Food Bank's location. However, the amount collected had to be sorted before being shelved and the entire basement area outside of the Food Bank became a sea of students and bags, as load after load was daisy chained down the hallway.

Meanwhile, courtesy of local businessman Guy Roberge from GBM Interieration, pizzas and beverages were set up to provide the students with lunch.

It was a busy day indeed for Shepherd's Cupboard, as Lorena Wilson and Bill Chambers, from Trans Alta, the wind turbine company, delivered $500 dollars worth of frozen turkeys and Mike Swidersky and Diane Griffith, from the Dufferin County Cattleman's Association, arrived with a freezer full of ground beef.

The Good Shepherd depends on the generosity of the community to be able to support those in need of a helping hand and the work of the students and staff at the CDDHS comes highly appreciated.

Without the dedication and hard work of these young people, many who depend on the Food Bank for that helping hand, would not find it offered.

Perhaps the time out of class is an added bonus incentive, but the overwhelming sense of community and being able to help is what really drives these young people to overachieve year after year in support of the Shepherd's Cupboard Food Bank and the residents of their town.

County Concert this weekend celebrates 144th anniversary

Written By MARNI WALSH

This coming Saturday (Oct. 5), at 3 p.m., Primrose United Church will celebrate its 144th anniversary with a Country concert at Grace Tipling Hall in Shelburne.

"An Afternoon of Classic Country Music," features Bruce Ley and friends, including band members Nathan Smith, Ryan Hancock, Tom Griffith, and Scott Bruyeva.

The funds raised will help maintain the historic "wee church" built in Mono Township in 1875. The church, in turn, supports local and global outreach projects, such as Partera International.

"Primrose United really wants to serve the community," Reverend Candice Bist told the Free Press, "The congregation is concerned with many issues, including homelessness and mental health."

The historic beauty of the little board building, located on 30th Sideroad in Mono, radiates a peaceful allure with its meditative garden and simplistic design. It is also a photogenic choice for a wedding or baptism. Church services at Primrose start at 9:15 a.m. on Sundays, and Sunday School is offered for children every week.

Celebrations marking the church's 144th year will also include a silent auction and a special Sunday service - where everyone is welcome. Items for auction include, gifts, services, handicrafts, quilts, dinners and baking - which will be available for bidding at the concert at Grace Tipling Hall.

That same day, Trinity United Church will hold its first "Interfaith" potluck starting at 6 p.m. after the Country Concert concludes. The event will take place in the "You Belong Here Room" in the lower level of Trinity Church at 200 Owen Sound Street in Shelburne.

The gathering hosted by Reverend Bist, along with Bella Carter an Islamic scholar from Shelburne, will celebrate the rich diversity of faiths in the community with dinner and a discussion focused on how guests live their faith. Oct. 5 is the first of what is to be a monthly interfaith invitation to dinner and discussion.

The tickets to "An Afternoon of Classic Country Music" in celebration of Primrose United Church's 144th anniversary are going fast. There are only 200 seats available.

The cost for the 3 p.m. concert is $20 and tickets may be picked up from Primrose Church members, or purchased at the door before the show on Oct. 5 at Grace Tipling Hall on the corner of Main and Victoria in Shelburne.

Six D-C candidates take 'Better Ballot Pledge' against personal attacks

Written By MIKE BAKER

With the federal election now less than three weeks away, voters across Dufferin-Caledon had the opportunity to catch their candidates in action for the first time this past week.

All six candidates bidding to become the riding's next Member of Parliament were on hand at Orangeville District Secondary School (ODSS) on Tuesday evening (Oct. 1) to participate in an election forum organized by the Dufferin Board of Trade. It was the second such event held in the riding, with a similar forum in Terra Cotta last Thursday (Sept. 26) having attracted all but one of the candidates seeking to become our next representative in Ottawa.

It would be fair to say that each of the six candidates made an impression on voters on Tuesday, with no clear and obvious winner on the night. All six took a stand on different issues over the course of the night, but perhaps the most important news to come out was the declaration that candidates had agreed to take the Better Ballot Pledge, something the Conservatives' Kyle Seeback addressed in his opening remarks.

"I'm proud of everyone up here, because we have all taken the Better Ballot Pledge," Mr. Seeback stated. "That means we're not going to engage in personal attacks, we're going to talk about our policies."

And that's exactly what they did. Mr. Seeback, Chad Ransom (People's Party), Russ Emo (Christian Heritage Party), Stefan Wiesen (Green Party), Allison Brown (NDP Party) and Michele Fisher (Liberal Party) each took turns explaining not only their party's stance and position on important issues, but their own personal beliefs, too.

Mr. Seeback kicked things off by discussing affordability in his opening speech, later touching on the importance of securing high-speed internet service for rural residents in the riding and, finally, committing to drive democratic reform should he be elected on Oct. 21.

"Everyone is working harder and harder now, yet finding at the end of the month they're not getting any further ahead. It's a big issue here in Dufferin-Caledon, it's a big issue in this country," Mr. Seeback stated. "A recent study released (stated) half of Canadian families are within $300 a month of not making ends meet. Their largest costs are taxes."

In keeping with his new party's mantra, PPC candidate Chad Ransom said it's "time for change" in the Canadian political arena. He believes the upstart right-wing group, launched by one-time Conservative leadership candidate Maxime Bernier last year, has a little something for everyone in their platform.

"If you're a classic Liberal, you're going to love our stance on free speech. If you're a classic NDP, you're going to love our stance against crony capitalism," Mr. Ransom noted. "If you're a Conservative, you're going to love the way we're going to save money, and if you're Green Party, you know we're going to find a solution that saves the environment, not just the climate."

He too touched on affordability in today's society, noting too many people are caught in the "vicious circle" of borrowing on a monthly basis just to be able to pay their bills. Mr. Ransom promised the PPC was here to "give the people back their power, give the people back their money and give the people back their choice".

Russ Emo of the Christian Heritage Party spent much of his time discussing the importance of establishing a strong family unit at home. Describing himself, and his party, as "pro-family, pro-life", Mr. Emo expressed his belief that government needs to put more trust in the general public when it comes to deciding where tax dollars should be spent.

"Strength of family is everything in this country. I grew up in a strong unit. We had tough times, but we were there for each other. I feel we're losing that each and every day," Mr. Emo stated. "Families now not only have both parents working (full-time), but they're often working part-time jobs" just to make ends meet. "This cycle needs to stop."

He added, "We need to put money back into everyone's pockets. It shouldn't be the government's choice of where they spend the money, it should be yours. It's your money, you work hard for that money, why not put it back into your pocket and you decide where it's spent? That's our platform."

There was big support for Green Party representative Stefan Wiesen on the night. Having grown up in Germany, Mr. Wiesen informed the crowd he always envisioned a career in politics. He went on to explain his "very simple" platform, which centred on the three P's – people, planet and prosperity.

"Some say the planet has to come first, I object to that, people have to come first. We people have failed, by and large, to save our planet for the next generation. We have runaway temperature rising, climate crisis, this is something we the people have caused. We have to start with people first," Mr. Wiesen stated. "Our democracy is almost broken. We need to fix the bickering, the cycle of one government coming in and doing something, then another government coming in, doing another, and changing things back. We have to get consensus."

Allison Brown, of the NDP Party, is the only candidate running in Dufferin-Caledon who does not live in the local riding. A registered nurse for the past 30 years, Ms. Brown spent much of her time discussing health care and affordability issues across the country. She pressed home her belief that the foundation of a national pharmacare program would benefit all Canadians moving forward.

"I feel like a soldier, a soldier being called to serve and I'm taking this opportunity to serve where I'm being called. I'm running for people who have sacrificed in their life to help someone do better," said Ms. Brown. "As our population ages and with us all living longer, to be truthful, a national pharmacare program will be one of the policies of the 21st century that will affect every Canadian across our nation. You may be blessed with good health right now and not have to rely on medication, but if you ever do need medication, and you're already working two jobs to make ends meet, you could find yourself in a precarious position where you can't afford medication. It's tough. It's not an easy thing."

Following discussions with residents throughout the riding in recent weeks, Ms. Brown admitted she met many people on low, or fixed incomes who had difficulty finding $4 to pay for the dispensing fee on medications they need to survive.

Speaking last, Michele Fisher suggested she stands the best chance of breaking the near 20-year Conservative hold on Dufferin-Caledon. Sharing her familial ties with politics – Ms. Fisher's mother was a politician – Michele also reflected on last week's global climate strike, which saw hundreds of local youth walk out of class to protest issues surrounding climate change.

With 338Canada officially declaring the Dufferin-Caledon riding as a "toss up" between the Conservatives and the Liberals this week, Ms. Fisher attempted to drive home exactly why a vote for her would be a "positive move" in the upcoming election.

"I plan to be a very strong advocate for Dufferin-Caledon. A champion for you, a champion for our families and a champion for our community. I'm proud to be running on the Liberal platform. I feel we've done a lot of really good things over the past four years. The fact that Canada, right now, is rated number one in the world for quality of life, there's a reason for that," Ms. Fisher stated.

"There's still more work to be done, quite a lot of work to be done, as there always is with every government, but I would love dearly to represent you and be that person moving things forward in Ottawa. I truly believe that together, we win."

THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWN OF SHELBURNE

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

REGARDING A PROPOSED COMMUNITY IMPROVEMENT PLAN UNDER SECTION 28 OF THE PLANNING ACT

Please be advised that the Corporation of the Town of Shelburne will be holding a public meeting on:

MONDAY, OCTOBER 28, 2019

The public meeting is scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m., or as shortly thereafter as possible, and will be held in the Council Chambers at the Municipal Office, 203 Main Street East, Shelburne.

The purpose of the meeting is to consider a proposed Community Improvement Plan (CIP) for the Town of Shelburne. The proposed CIP provides a guide for future community improvements in Shelburne including:

- Design guidelines that outline '12 Big Moves' for potential improvements to buildings primarily in the Downtown and corner buildings at key intersections, the public realm including Main Street, community gateways/entrances, Fiddle Park, Jack Downey Park, and mobility improvements;
- Incentive programs to stimulate private sector investment in building and property rehabilitation, development and redevelopment; and,
- Implementation and marketing strategies.

The land to which the proposed CIP applies generally includes all land within the corporate limits of the Town of Shelburne. For this reason, no map of the subject land has been provided. Certain land within the Town of Shelburne is subject to other applications under the Planning Act, and information about currently active planning applications can be obtained by contacting the Town of Shelburne office.

Additional information and material about the proposed CIP, including a copy of the draft CIP, is available in the Town of Shelburne Office during regular office hours, Monday to Friday, from 8:30 am to 4:30 pm, and on the Town's website at www.shelburne.ca.

If you wish to be notified of the adoption of the proposed CIP, you must make a written request to the Town of Shelburne delivered to the Town Clerk.

The County of Dufferin is the approval authority for the Town of Shelburne CIP. If a person or public body would otherwise have an ability to appeal the decision of the County of Dufferin to the Local Planning Appeal Tribunal but the person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the Town of Shelburne before the proposed CIP is adopted, the person or public body is not entitled to appeal the decision. If a person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the Town of Shelburne before the CIP is adopted, the person or public body may not be added as a party to the hearing of an appeal before the Local Planning Appeal Tribunal unless, in the opinion of the Tribunal, there are reasonable grounds to add the person or public body as a party.

Dated at the Town of Shelburne this 3rd day of October, 2019.

Geography

I was listening to a radio talk show the other day discussing urban housing in the big city.

A guest journalist told a story of interviewing a guy in the lovely Jane / Finch area of Toronto.

The guy's version of the world was so insulated by the four or five blocks of that neighborhood, he had no idea that the city of Toronto was built on a lake. Yes, lake Ontario. It's a body of water covering almost 19,000 square kilometers and this guy had no idea it was there.

I wasn't all that surprised really.

Years ago when I lived in Toronto we were organizing a get-together at some near downtown restaurant.

My friend's girlfriend at the time lived in the east part of the city. Because she was coming from the opposite side of the city than the rest of us we gave her directions. However, it made no sense to her at all.

She kept asking which subway stop the restaurant was at. Her entire world existed only in stops on a train line with no concept of any other location or how to get there. A trip outside of the city for her would be akin to going to Mars without a travel book.

It seems many people do not realize exactly how big the world really is.

When was the last time you looked at a map of Ontario that actually included the entire province?

The full size map of Ontario that hangs on my office wall only goes north to Sudbury. With a couple of small exceptions, and Thunder Bay, the population of the entire province is listed on that map from Windsor to Ottawa.

But Ontario continues north – a lot farther north. Northern Ontario is very sparsely populated and is nothing but trees, thousands of lakes, and a lot of granite. It is larger than just about every country in Europe, and yet the vast majority of people in this province have never been there or seem to be aware of exactly how big it is.

Remember those maps of the world you had in your classroom in school? Well, they're all wrong. At least wrong in laying out what the planet really looks like.

In fairness to map makers, this is because it is difficult to take a globe like the earth and draw it on a two dimensional piece of paper while keeping the lines of longitude and latitude.

Russia is a lot smaller than it appears on maps. Africa is LOT larger than it appears on maps. And remember Greenland, that massive island in the North Atlantic? It's actually only around a quarter of the size shown on a map and is roughly the same size as Algeria.

To demonstrate the sheer size of this plane, the entire U.S.A. could fit inside the Sahara Desert.

Imagine an area from Maine to Southern California, and it's all sand.

Air travel seems to have dulled peoples sense of distance.

I was once part of a broadcast interview with some women who were from California and, ahem, 'performing' in Toronto in a show.

The interviewer asked one girl how long the flight from California had been.

She replied, "It was a five hour flight, so I guess it would have taken us eight hours if we drove."

It was a total 'face palm' moment as the sound guy and I looked at each other in disbelief realizing a grown woman didn't know the difference between driving on land and flying at 500 mph at 35,000 feet.

When I was a kid in school, there was in our science textbooks and backed up by the teacher, a demonstration showing a ship leaving port and heading out to sea. In the photos the ship got smaller and smaller until it disappeared over the horizon. According to the book this demonstrated show the curve of the earth made the ship seem to disappear.

This of course was nonsense. If a slow moving ship crested the curve of the earth that quickly, it would be docking on the opposite coast of North America by noon the next day.

That demonstration of the curvature of the earth is easily debunked. I recently watched a very good YouTube video of this using an extremely powerful lens. It showed a full sized freighter on very flat water. The video then slowly pulled out until the ship simply disappeared and there was a normal eye level view of the ocean.

The ship was still there, on flat water, you're eyes just aren't that powerful enough to see that far.

The world may be getting smaller thanks to advanced air travel, but it's still a lot bigger than most of us realize.

Our unused weapon against climate change

CRITICS OF CARBON TAXES often argue that such measures designed to limit man-made climate change will achieve little so long as countries like China and India are burning ever more coal and building even more coal-fired power plants.

The problem shared by China and India is a relative lack of alternatives, their growing populations and economies require much more electricity than could ever come from wind and solar farms and neither country is the source of much oil and natural gas.

And while one option might be nuclear energy, serious nuclear power plant accidents, including the Fukushima Daiichi disaster in Japan in 2011, the Chernobyl disaster in Ukraine in 1986, and the Three Mile Island accident near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 40 years ago in 1979, have led to the virtual abandonment of an option that involves no greenhouse gas emissions.

But one thing seldom mentioned by those commenting on the disasters is that all the power plants were of a different design from those in Canada, where all the reactors in Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick were of the unique CANDU design and the only serious mishap was caused by the failure of Ontario Hydro to inspect the reactors' pressure tubes.

There have been two major types of CANDU reactors, the original design of around 500 megawatts (MW) that was intended to be used in multi-reactor installations in large plants, and the larger CANDU 6 in the 600 MWe class that is designed to be used in single stand-alone units or in small multi-unit plants. CANDU 6 units were built in Quebec and New Brunswick, as well as Pakistan, Argentina, South Korea, Romania, and China, and a non-CANDU 6 design was sold to India. The multi-unit design was used only in Ontario's Bruce and Darlington plants, with outputs ranging from 750 to 880 MW per unit.

By the early 2000s, sales prospects for the original CANDU designs were dwindling and Atomic Energy of Canada began work on an advanced design, with the first units to go into an expansion of the Darlington plant. But when the need to enlarge Darlington disappeared, the project was cancelled in 2009 and two years later the Harper government opted to sell off the CANDU design to a wholly owned subsidiary of SNC-Lavalin along with the former reactor development and marketing division of AECL at that time. The new owner has offered support services for existing sites and is completing formerly stalled installations in Romania and Argentina through a partnership with China National Nuclear Corporation. SNC Lavalin has apparently been exploring sales to Argentina, China and Britain but thus far without success.

In the circumstances, we think whichever party wins this month's election should look seriously at returning CANDU to AECL and launching a major marketing operation aimed at the Far East, pointing out that the Canadian design is the only one with a proven safety record Its website boasts buttressed by a unique ability to re-fuel the reactors while they are online and to completely retube a reactor when necessary, extending the life of the power plant indefinitely.

Perhaps the best idea would be to place the new sales effort in the hands of Bruce Power, Canada's first private nuclear generator, which is currently providing 30 per cent of Ontario's power from its management of the Bruce Nuclear Power Development near Kincardine. Its website boasts that the eight Bruce units "provide over 4,000 full-time, direct jobs to highly skilled employees, and thousands more indirectly. We inject billions of dollars into Ontario's economy annually, while producing safe energy that produces zero carbon emissions."

Bruce Power is a partnership among TransCanada Corp., OMERS Infrastructure Management Inc. (a trust established by the Ontario Municipal Employees Retirement System), The Power Workers' Union and The Society of Energy Professionals. Over 90 per cent of the employees also own a part of the company.

Shelburne RIDE stop results in drug trafficking charges

Shortly after 1 a.m. on Sunday (Sept. 29), a pick-up truck caught the attention of Shelburne Police officers who were conducting a R.I.D.E. program.

The officers noted evidence of marijuana being transported illegally. Under the Cannabis laws, operating a motor vehicle with a minor amount of marijuana readily accessible to the driver is an offence resulting in a ticket for $215.

In this case however, as officers continued their investigation, they located larger quantities of dried marijuana, as well as cannabis solids, cannabis edibles, and even the typical tools of the drug trafficking trade.

From the vehicle and the two occupants, officers seized $650 cash, drug trade tools, and approximately $2,500 street value worth of dried cannabis, cannabis solids and cannabis edibles.

As a result 41 year old Robby Donkin of Hanover was charged with Possession Over 30g (or equivalent) of Cannabis, and Possession of Cannabis For the Purpose of Distribution; both under the new Federal Cannabis Act. Further Donkin was charged with Possession of Proceeds of Crime under the Criminal Code of Canada.

Further, 41 year old Chad Townsend of Warton was with Possession Over 30g (or equivalent) of Cannabis under the new federal Cannabis Act, as well as drive Vehicle with Cannabis Readily Available under the new provincial Cannabis Control Act.

Both accused have their first court appearances at the Orangeville Court House in early November to answer to these allegations.

“People need to think about how they transport Cannabis – even when they have legal amounts. The cannabis must be sealed into baggage and not readily available to the driver. The laws are the same idea as with alcohol which everyone is familiar with – you can’t drive with open alcohol accessible to the driver in a vehicle”, states Sgt. Neumann.

“Further, although possessing small amounts of cannabis is legal, the laws and penalties for illegally distributing cannabis and cannabis products have become much more stringent and severe under the new legislation. A conviction of illegally distributing even small amounts of marijuana can result in heavy fines, jail time, and probation”, added Sgt Neumann.

If anyone has any information in relation to this case or any other matter, they are encouraged to contact the Shelburne Police Service at 519-925-3312 or anonymously through Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477) or online at www.crimestoppersdm.com.

Man dies after Highway 89 collision

Members of the Dufferin Detachment and Traffic Collision Investigators of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) with the assistance of Shelburne Police Service, Shelburne and District Fire Department and Dufferin County Emergency Medical Services (EMS) attended the scene of a fatal motor vehicle collision on Highway 89 between County Road 12 and the 4th Line on Monday morning (Sept. 30) around 9:15am.

The collision involved a passenger vehicle and a transport truck. The driver of the passenger vehicle, Leonard Ford, 66-year-old of Hanover was pronounced deceased at the scene. The driver of the transport truck suffered no physical injuries.

Highway 89 was closed for several hours to allow for OPP to investigate. The cause of the collision is still under investigation.

Shelburne Homesellers: Avoid Falling Short of Home Inspection Requirements

SHELBURNE - According to industry experts, there are over 33 physical problems that will come under scrutiny during a home inspection when your home is for sale. A new report has been prepared which identifies the fourteen most common of these problems, and what you should know about them before you list your home for sale.

Whether you own an old home or a brand new one, there are a number of things that can fall short of requirements during a home inspection. If not identified and dealt with, any of these 14 items could cost you dearly in terms of repair. That’s why it’s critical that you read this report before you list your home. If you wait until the building inspector flags these issues for you, you will almost certainly experience costly delays in the close of your home sale or, worse, turn prospective buyers away altogether. In most cases, you can make a reasonable pre-inspection yourself if you know what you’re looking for and knowing what you’re looking for can help you prevent little problems from growing into costly and unmanageable ones.

To help homesellers deal with this issue before their homes are listed, a free report entitled “14 Things You Need to Know to Pass Your Home Inspection” has been compiled which explains the issues involved.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your FREE copy of this report call toll-free 1-855-782-3460 and enter ID #4403. You can call any time, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Get your free special report NOW to learn how to ensure a home inspection doesn’t cost you the sale of your home.

Golf Tournament supports Jumpstart to help kids play sports

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

Over 80 golfers turned out to take part in a golf tournament to raise funds for Jumpstart at the Shelburne Golf & Country Club on Tuesday, October 1.

The tournament was sponsored by AllPro Roofing.

Jumpstart is a program run by Canadian Tire and Mark's Work Warehouse that helps kids take part in sports and physical activity who otherwise may not have the funds to suit up for hockey or play other sports.

This was the first year that AllPro Roofing held the tournament as a fundraiser.

They previously held golf tournaments as a social event for the company and other related business but this year they decided that since they were going to host a tournament, they would also raise money for a good cause.

"Every year we have a company tournament and this year we decided to turn it into a charity tournament," explained AllPro roofing president Jamie Bates. "We have all our same business clientele but instead of having a corporate event, it's a charity event. Normally we have a small tournament with only 18 players. This year the funds go to Jumpstart. Jumpstart is a program for kids who can't afford to play sports. The funds raised all go back to Dufferin County Jumpstart. It's all local. All the funds are dispersed locally. We haven't done a final count yet but it looks like we were going to raise close to $12,000."

Both Canadian Tire and Mark's Work Warehouse have programs and promotions they use to add funds to the Jumpstart program.

Many families struggle with the playing fees and cost of equipment to play sport. Jumpstart uses a set of criteria to determine who they can help.

"Hockey and lacrosse are the big ones in this area because they are expensive sports to play," Mr. Bates said. "The reason I chose this is because growing up I was playing rep hockey. I grew up with four brothers and all of us played hockey and lacrosse. Today we had 84 participants – not bad for our first year as a charity event. We had a shotgun

BIG WIN: The Centre Dufferin District High School Royals senior basketball team host the Norwell District Secondary School Varsity Reds in the gym at CDDHS on Wednesday, September 25. The Royals came out on top with a 52 - 20 win in their first game of the season.

CDDHS Royals Sr. Girls win in basketball season opener

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

The Centre Dufferin District High School Royals senior girls basketball team opened the season with a convincing win over the Norwell District Secondary School Varsity Reds in the gym at CDDHS on Wednesday, September 25.

The Royals started off strong in the afternoon game scoring 20 points in the first quarter while keeping Norwell pinned to a single basket.

The second quarter saw the Royals again play a strong offensive game while keeping the Reds to the outside and limiting their chances.

"I thought our game was really good," said Royals forward Franny McGowan after the final buzzer sounded. "We executed our players super well. I was nice to practice them against a not super competitive team. We were doing well with the set plays we had practiced before. It all worked out."

The squad played a solid defensive game and were shooting well when they were in the zone.

"We haven't really practiced a lot of defence in practices, but because we're a senior team we have played with each other before so it's nice to be able to go out and play our game."

The Royals returned for the second half and scored six points in the first minute of the third quarter.

They were leading 45 - 12 at the end of the quarter.

The game ended with a 52 - 20 win for the CDDHS team in their first outing of the season.

There are six schools entered in District 4 senior girls competition this year. They will play a ten game regular season schedule.

The Royals will have five games on their home court.

They will be back in action in the gym at Centre Dufferin on Monday, October 7, when they will host Emmanuel Christian High School.

Game time is 2:30 p.m.

Six D-C candidates take 'Better Ballot Pledge' against personal attacks

Candidates faced six questions on the night. The first centred on each party's plans to resolve trade issues with other countries and how they would go about compensating farmers for lost market opportunities outside of their control. Directly referencing what he described as Canada's "difficult" relationship with China, Mr. Seeback expressed his belief that the federal government needs to be stronger when it comes to foreign affairs.

"Disputes with China have severely impacted farmers. I had a great meeting with the Dufferin Federation of Agriculture, and they talked about how they're losing access to markets in China. The main problem with that is the way our government has been handling the relationship with China," Mr. Seeback said.

He added, "It's time for us to stand up to China and say we're not going to be pushed around. We need access to markets. China is a country that respects strength. It doesn't respect people who continuously let them walk all of you. That's unfortunately what has happened for the past four years."

Mr. Seeback said the federal government should take "counter measures" against the Chinese government to better support Canadian farmers, going so far as to suggest that an annual commitment to the tune of $250 million to the Asia Infrastructure Bank, largely controlled and run by the Chinese government, should stop immediately.

Candidates were asked how a basic income program could be supported across Canada. A three-year basic income pilot project, launched by the Wynne government in 2016 and made available to residents in Hamilton, Lindsay and Thunder Bay, was one of the initiatives cancelled by the Doug Ford Progressive Conservative government after it came into power in 2017. Allison Brown noted the NDP has a plan to make life more affordable for low-income families.

"We believe everyone deserves a living wage. The NDP will put in place a federal minimum wage of $15 an hour. That would cover more than 900,000 workers. It would not only help hundreds of thousands of workers, but would also set the national standard for a fair living wage," Ms. Brown stated.

The lack of options for high speed internet for Dufferin-Caledon residents was discussed after candidates were asked what they would do to improve the service in the riding. It has now been more than four years since SWIFT (Southwestern Integrated Fibre Technology) announced plans to enable to expansion of high-speed broadband networks by lessening the financial burden on service providers that have determined it is too expensive to implement improved Internet infrastructure in rural areas. The organization has so far raised more than $200 million from the provincial and federal governments and the private sector to move forward with its plans to develop that infrastructure, although plans for Dufferin-Caledon are still to be established.

Chad Ransom believes the solution to providing better high-speed internet service to rural residents is to promote competition in the ISP industry.

"When it comes down to it, both (the Conservative and Liberal) governments have had chances to find a solution on this issue and they haven't found one," Mr. Ransom stated. "I would like to deregulate the CRTC (Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission). I'd like to have an open market, and a free market."

He added, "It doesn't only come down to high speed internet. Canadians also pay the most for their cell phone bill in the world. The CRTC and government regulations have stopped Canadians from saving money. It's about time we went to a free market and allow competition to decide who is going to win."

In one of a few laughs on the night, Stefan Wiesen was afforded the opportunity to be the first candidate to answer a question regarding alternate energy sources available to Canada. He didn't pull any punches, condemning the current and previous governments for what he perceives as their failure to keep up with the rest of the world when it comes to utilizing renewable energy options. "Canada is at the very bottom of the list of nations, not only industrialized, but also third world, when it comes to renewable energy. We have failed," Mr. Wiesen remarked, noting only 3.3 percent of Canada's power generation comes from renewable energy sources. "There is so much we can do on the renewable side, so many different sources not yet explored. We have bioreactors, fuels from renewable resources, but for us, the real power we're missing is infrastructure."

He added, "Our electrical grid does not go from east to west. Right now, Quebec produces more hydro than they can use, but it all goes down to the United States. I'm not suggesting we should cut supply contracts with the U.S., but I would like to build a grid (to transport hydro to western Canada). I can't say tomorrow that we will have clean energy, it will take time, but we have the ideas, we have the vision here to transition our economy away from fossil fuels to renewables. It's all highlighted under our Vision Green (plan)."

Homelessness is an issue across practically every community in Canada. Dufferin County and Caledon are no exception. Michele Fisher said a re-elected Liberal government would do its part to provide solutions for the country's most vulnerable residents.

"I hear the waiting list for social housing in this community is 43 years long. One of the solutions for homelessness is providing more affordable housing, social housing and supportive housing for people with disabilities, mental health issues and addiction issues. The only thing we can do, is invest in it," Ms. Fisher stated. "The Liberals created Canada's first national housing strategy. We're building affordable housing across the country, but we need to do more. I would like to see us work more with the province and municipalities to get funding in place to create more affordable housing for homeless and low income people across the riding."

Something of a hot-button topic right now is the child-care crisis in most municipalities in southern Ontario. Candidates were asked what their party would do to address this issue. Taking turns to answer, Ms. Fisher noted the Liberals would provide an additional 250,000 spots for before- and after-school child care across the country, while reducing fees for those programs by 10 percent.

Mr. Seeback highlighted the Conservative Party's history in developing Canada's universal child-care benefit, which helped families offset some of the costs associated with childcare. He noted the Conservatives plan to implement additional tax-free maternity benefits to lighten the load on young families across the country.

Stefan Wiesen noted the Green Party doesn't want to set up additional child-care centres across Canada, instead enabling parents to look after their children at home, something echoed by Christian Heritage Party's Russ Emo.

"The CHP believes, first and foremost, parents are the best and should be the primary caregivers of their children. We take our children from the beginning, they don't come with an owner's manual, and we teach them the basics of life. We believe that tax-funded child care is no substitute for that," Mr. Emo stated. "Children do best in their homes with their parents teaching them, watching over them and instilling their values into them."

He added that to make life more affordable for Canadians and allow at least one parent to stay home to care for their children, the CHP would eliminate income tax.

"We feel you know how to work best with your money."

In closing, Ms. Brown noted the NDP government would invest $1 billion in 2020 and increase annual investments across all Canadian provinces and territories to ensure affordable and quality child-care options are available to all families.

"Nobody should be forced between having a family and having a career," she stated.

The federal election will take place on Oct. 21.

OBITUARIES

Wenn, Ruth (nee Wood)

Peacefully at Headwaters Healthcare Centre, Orangeville, on Thursday Sept. 26, 2019, Ruth Wenn (nee Wood), at age 93, passed into her Saviour's loving hands. Beloved wife of 60 years of the late Jack Hartford Wenn. Devoted mother of Diane and her husband Stuart of Demorestville, Nancy and her husband Bob of Amaranth. Dear sister of the late Lenny, Bert, Mary and May of Fredericton. Cherished Nana of Cynthia (Peter) Norton, Stephen Wenn, Scott Dickie, and Adam (Jess French) Dickie. Loved Great Nana of Austin and Ethan Wenn, Jack and Patrick Norton. Lovingly remembered by her niece Darlene, nephew Tommy and great nephew Jim. Ruth provided a safe haven for many foster children, loved to garden, feed the birds, read her bible and do puzzles. She was always kind, loving and supportive to all that were part of her life. She will be greatly missed by her family and all who crossed into her life. Donations to your local hospital or OSPCA would be appreciated by her family. A Celebration of Life will be held at a later date. A tree will be planted in memory of Ruth in the Dods & McNair Memorial Forest at the Island Lake Conservation Area, Orangeville. The annual dedication service will be held on Sunday, September 13, 2020 at 2:30 p.m. Condolences may be offered to the family at www.dodsandmcnair.com
