Dufferin-Caledon region to see $12 million investment to rural broadband infrastructure

Written By MIKE BAKER

Many rural households across Dufferin-Caledon will soon be introduced to the 21st century, with Southwestern Integrated Fibre Technology (SWIFT) set to invest $12.4 million in a broadband internet infrastructure expansion in the region.

Announced on Monday (June 1), the proposal will see $7.2 million worth of work carried out in Dufferin County, with an additional $5.2 million invested in Caledon. The project, which will improve access to faster, reliable internet services for hundreds of homes in the area, is being co-funded by the provincial and federal governments.

Ernie Hardeman, Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs, informed media the improvements in the Dufferin-Caledon area have been given the green light, and that SWIFT was now in the process of evaluating bids from contractors to complete the work.

"I am very pleased to see Dufferin and Caledon be included in this funding. I thank Minister Hardeman for working with our communities to get this critical infrastructure service that is needed," Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones told the Free Press. "Reliable internet connection is an important investment for our businesses, agriculture community and students."

Specific details surrounding the initiative, particularly regarding the number of homes that stand to benefit, is unknown at this time, although it is believed to be a substantial amount. Melissa O'Brien, Manager of Communications and Stakeholder Relations with SWIFT, said more information would be forthcoming as soon as the organization hires a firm to complete the work.

"The number of premises passed, as well as construction timelines, network designs and implementation details are included in the proposals submitted by the service providers during the procurement process. Therefore, such details will remain unknown until SWIFT has completed its evaluation assessment of all compliant proposals," Ms. O'Brien said. "However, it is important to note that during the evaluation process, SWIFT focuses on proposals that result in the best outcomes. Generally, 'best outcomes' means more homes passed."

When asked to elaborate on the technology that would be installed, and how much of a difference this would make to rural homes who, currently, do not have access to high-speed internet, Ms. O'Brien stopped short of offering any guarantees.

"This information will remain unknown until after the RFPs have closed, and SWIFT has conducted a formal evaluation of all compliant bids for the Caledon and Dufferin areas," she said. "SWIFT will accept proposals based on Fibre-to-the-home (FTTH), Hybrid Fibre Coaxial (HFC), Digital Subscriber Line (DSL) and wireless technologies as long as they meet the minimum requirement of providing a 50/10 service."

She added, "Announcements of this nature will be provided after the evaluation is complete and contracts have been awarded to the internet service providers."

Residents at Dufferin Oaks are now one step closer to family

Written By MARNI WALSH

After spending months in isolation due to COVID-19, residents at Dufferin Oaks long term care facility in Shelburne, are one step closer to being reunited, in person, with those they love.

Fencing has been installed to create a space for visitors to see and speak with the residents at a safe distance.

Brenda Wagner, Administrator of Dufferin Oaks says the new social distancing visiting area at Dufferin Oaks was initiated by Cathy Roberston, a personal support worker at the residence. She says, Ms. Robertson brought forward the idea to the management team "after she and her husband realized that his company may be able to help support distanced visits for residents and families."

Mr. Robertson, a director with Modu Loc Fence Rentals, and his crew, worked with Dufferin Oaks maintenance department to set up the area says Benda Wagner. Construction started the week of May 18th and scheduled visits started the following week.

"We have been able to host over 50 visits so far," says the Administrator. "Currently, we are able to have one resident visit at a time, but based on need, we are looking at expanding the area to enable more visits." She says that although the area is covered, the visits are weather dependent.

We've set the visits up to be 20-30 minutes, however, residents can access the outdoor area of the home at any time. People need to distance themselves a minimum of 6 feet from each other. Currently, due to the overall demand we are trying to limit one visit per week to give all residents a chance to visit.

Brenda Wagner says, "All visits must be scheduled in advance with our Program and Support Services Manager, Angie Matthews. Guidelines include not visiting if you are unwell, respecting social distancing guidelines, staying in the designated area, and being mindful of poor weather which may impact the ability to visit."

"We've had many positive comments from both families and residents," says Brenda Wagner. "While the implementation of virtual face time visits have been very beneficial, seeing your loved one in person is much better. It gives our residents something very positive to look forward to and it gives our families peace of mind to see their loved one in person."

She says the staff and residents at Dufferin Oaks "continue to be so grateful to our families and the community for their ongoing support during this very difficult time. We look forward to the time when we can open the home up to visitors once again."

Changes to Blue Box recycling program could soon be coming to Dufferin County

Written By JAMES MATTHEWS

Dufferin County has thrown support behind an effort to have producers pay all costs to collect and recycle the materials for which their responsible.

County council agreed during its May 28 meeting to stand by the Municipalities Association Ontario in its effort to change the setup of the Blue Box Program.

Changes to the program have been in the works since 2019.

Environment, Conservation and Parks Minister Jeff Yurek said the change will take municipal taxpayers off the hook for the program's costs. Producers of products and packaging will become completely responsible.

"Transitioning the Blue Box Program to full producer responsibility will promote innovation and increase Ontario's recycling rates while saving taxpayers money," Yurek said in August 2019.

"This shift is a big step towards diverting waste, addressing plastic pollution and creating a new recycling economy that everyone can be proud of in Ontario."

Given the terms of the county's current collection and processing contracts, a transition in 2023 is optimal for Dufferin County.

In Dufferin, the curbside collections contract expires May 31, 2022. A further one-year extension will need to be negotiated with the collections contractor to align with the 2023 timeline.

"This avoids a new long-term contract at a time of much uncertainty and would bridge the county into the new producer responsibility framework," reads a report to council by Public Works Director Scott Burns.

Dufferin's recyclables processing contract expires May 31, 2023.

"The way it is now, in some instances, it's overkill as far as packaging is concerned," said Councillor Bob Currie, Amaranth's mayor. "What it's going to be is the producer of the garbage, the extra packaging, is going to have to pay for it."

"This avoids a new long-term contract at a time of much uncertainty and would bridge the county into the new producer responsibility framework"

Scott Burns
Dufferin County Public Works Director

Coun. Sandy Brown, who is also Orangeville's mayor, said early morning thefts of recyclable aluminum cans and bottles from curbside residential Blue Boxes has become a frequent occurrence.

"And that is dipping into our funds we get from the recycling," said Coun. Brown. "People taking things out of Blue Bins is actually theft," he said.

Coun. Currie said there's a few hundred thousand dollars annually put into county coffers through recycling.

"Aluminum is worth money," he said. "You might think you only have a few tins of your own but, if you put that across the whole county, there's quite a few tonnes of metal every year and Dufferin (County) gets the revenue for it."

Coun. Steve Anderson, Shelburne's deputy mayor, recognized there could be another issue in play associated with thefts of recyclables. And that should be addressed when details about the program changes are brought to the public, he said.

"In addition to letting people know there are consequences for the theft, I would also point out any resources that are available for people who are in need," said Coun. Anderson. "If these thefts are occurring because these people feel they have to get money to feed their families, there are alternatives that will not get you in the hands of the law."

Working from home

The media was filled with stories and interviews from top officials this past week encouraging to people to 'continue to work from home.'

The obvious reasoning is if you aren't going into work you won't be spreading the COVID-19 virus to your office space.

That sounds great, coming from a bunch of people whose world revolves around an office type environment in downtown Toronto. What seemed to be lacking in the directive is the understanding that for many, probably most people across Ontario, working from home is not an option.

While the directive is well-intentioned, it simply is not practical for most people who want to continue to earn a pay cheque.

Some companies have adapted quite well to a home based environment – at least for the time being.

One major radio station I listen to on a regular basis has equipped all their hosts with the ability to broadcast from home, and it's working quite well.

This new home-based working environment is a relatively new concept and is only practical for some people based on the ability to transmit electronic information via e-mail and the internet. In the case of the radio station, the ability to utilize modern technology allows them to send out broadcasts over the airways in a way that would not have been possible just 30 years ago.

Prior to internet availability, the only people who could really work from home were those who were self employed and had a home based business and office.

However, what if your work is that of a more practical hands-on nature?

I'm not sure receiving instructions via Skype from your dentist on how to drill and fill that problem tooth will work to your advantage, no matter how thoroughly your dentist explains the procedure.

The list of people who can't work from home is huge.

That list includes pretty much everyone working in the trades and related business. I can't think of a single trade where you could accomplish the job from a home office.

The entire transportation industry, and that includes the big rigs that distribute food across the continent, is based on getting out there and doing the job. If truck drivers decided to stay home, we would be in trouble very soon as supply lines dried up.

Not only would you not be able to find an apple in the grocery store, good luck getting parts for your car or a new part for your refrigerator or furnace.

Prior to leaving the warehouse, that new alternator you need for your car needs to be manufactured. While the engineers who design them may be able to get away with working from home, the people who actually build them can't. That includes machinists and anyone involved in putting an alternator together, and the people who work on the loading dock and get them in the trucks for delivery.

That new car you've been hoping to buy because the old clunker is just about ready to give up, isn't built by people in their home garage. It is assembled by a lot of people who need to go into work to get the job done.

I've heard many people say they envy those that can work from home. Just think – no commute, no getting dressed up for the job – just walk down the hall to your home office and start your day.

That may sound ideal to some, but the reality for many people is that their life at work is a big part of their social experience.

When you're working from home on a daily basis, those four walls in your home office can close in on you pretty fast. Distractions come easily and frequently.

Part of the experience of working outside of your home is the social interaction with co-workers, clients, and visitors to your place of business.

For many, those daily interactions make life interesting.

Mental health experts have been warning that the current 'stay at home' directives have been impacting the ability of some people to cope with isolation. Especially those who are already experiencing mental health issues.

People who have such issues can thrive on meeting other people and just getting out there and being part of society.

Working at home is a temporary solution to a temporary problem.

The sooner we get back to regular social interaction, the better it will be for all of us.

BRIAN LOCKHART
FROM THE SECOND ROW

Time to open, test and trace

DESPITE CALLS by local public health units for an ability to have the anti-COVID-19 rules reflect actual conditions, the Ontario legislature has voted to extend the state of emergency to the end of this month.

What this means is that the same rules will apply everywhere in this province of 14 million, where roughly 400 new cases of the coronavirus are detected each day along with a significant number of deaths.

We long ago heard that public health authorities had recommended, and the Ford government accepted, that the virtual lockdown of the province should continue until there had been at least 14 days of declines in both new cases and deaths.

The problem has been that clearly you cannot safely return to having theatres, sporting events and exhibitions open anywhere there is real evidence of 'community spread' of this highly contagious virus which has taken more than 380,000 lives worldwide, 108,000 of them in the United States and 7,400 in Canada.

Even in Ontario, the death toll has reached nearly 3000. However, about 80 per cent of those who died were in long-term-care facilities and roughly the same percentage were in the Golden Horseshoe, Windsor and Ottawa.

Even in our local public health unit, covering the city of Guelph and counties of Dufferin and Wellington, the death toll has been relatively miniscule, at 35, and the number of new cases plummeted in May. Although there have been outbreaks in Shelburne Residence, Dufferin Oaks and one Guelph facility, all the outbreaks have been declared over.

We strongly suspect that if the Province permitted local public health units to determine when and to what extent the local economy should be freed from continuing restrictions, even WDG Public Health would see no continuing need to bar theatres and barber shops from re-opening, so long as staffs and customers wore masks and didn't use the facilities if they had a fever or sniffles.

And if that's the case here, what about farther north, where Grey and Bruce counties have had no COVID-19 deaths, or Northern Ontario, where the Sudbury District has had just 64 cases and two deaths, with no new cases for weeks?

As we see it, the Province ought to allow all local public health units to set rules that reflect their local conditions rather than the situation in places like the GTA.

The idea would be to allow what amounts to a pre-COVID normality in any area where the universal wearing of masks and social distancing accompanied by widespread testing and tracing would leave us in a situation where hospitals could easily deal with an outbreak of the sort witnessed in northern New Brunswick, where one doctor failed to self-isolate for 14 days after making a social visit to hard-hit Quebec and managed to infect literally hundreds of his patients in both nursing homes and a hospital.

Had there been immediate testing of the physician, the outbreak could have been dealt with effectively, without forcing a return to localized lockdowns and threatening to cause the province's first COVID-related death.

As is already being witnessed in many U.S. states, it will be pointless to invite the general public to resume their old shopping habits if there is reasonable suspicion that the virus is still present in the local community. After all, it is invisible and the best way you'll get folks into stores is through a combination of testing the local populace and tracing each and every outbreak.

Were this the approach adopted by Queen's Park, we might well see a safe return of both sports and arts activities in most of the province, and tougher moves in the remaining 'hot spots' aimed at securing an economic revival.

Meanwhile, a top priority for the government will be to secure a speedy conclusion of the planned investigation into the causes behind the huge death toll in long-term-care facilities, which must be accompanied by procurement of enough personal protective equipment to cope with the expected new wave of COVID-19 next fall.

Shelburne's 'Enchanting Esthetics' invests in creative change

Written By MARNI WALSH

The new renovations at Enchanting Esthetics and More have received praise from a Shelburne Councillor, and the attention of the Free Press.

The changes represent a long term investment by owner Jasmine McCabe, in both customer service and customer confidence, as the entrepreneur adapts her establishment for client safety with creative flare.

As businesses across the province prepare for the eventuality of reopening when health and safety conditions allow, owners and managers have been brainstorming strategies for adapting to the 'new normal' in order to maximize staff and customer safety.

Shelburne Councillor, Shane Hall, a senior executive at KTH, has had the opportunity to meet with many business as they prepare to reopen, and he feels Enchanting Esthetics and More "stood out among the rest."

Coun. Hall says owner, Jasmine McCabe, "has looked at the things that must be done, and has made the commitment to invest in the changes, rather than just a short term temporary fix."

Jasmine McCabe was raised on her parents' farm in Amaranth, and attended Centre Dufferin District High School in Shelburne. After completing a Sheridan College esthetics program in 2008, Jasmine knew she wanted returned to Shelburne to set up shop. Now, 12 years later, Jasmine is a mother of two, and her business has grown from "a one person service to offering multiple services in one location."

"Today, things have become a challenge," she told the Free Press. "COVID-19 has closed down our business along with many others. Trying to turn a negative into a positive, during this time, our team has worked hard to take extra courses to keep up on new techniques and to understand how to prepare to reopen and serve our clients in our safe environment."

That worth ethic has certainly impressed Coun. Hall.

"The thing I would say that inspired me most," says Councillor Hall, "is her dedication." He says, "She obviously spent time and money to create a specific ambience in her store, and really put a lot of thought into how COVID-19 was going to impact that."

Coun. Hall notes that, in an effort to support local businesses with their restart, a small group of business minded people have gathered to help. Being one of those people, the councillor says he had the opportunity to see what Jasmine was doing.

"She had the vision to really look towards making these new safety measures meet the 'feel' of her store - it is outstanding," he says. "The first thing that comes to mind, is who could make plexiglass looks so good!" he says. Turning an expense into an investment, is not always easy to do, and I feel she has done it in the best way possible."

Jasmine McCabe is proud to say that it was her sister, Jade, also an entrepreneur as the owner of Jade's Junkyard Jems, who made the new plexiglass installations at Enchanting Esthetics "look so good." Jasmine says her sister "designed and installed 'classy' Lexan, a thicker type of plexiglass, to ensure each client has a specific safe area."

"Many of our clients have become our honorary family, and I can't tell you how important each and every client is to us," Jasmine says.

"Additionally," she adds, "Clients will be pre-screened before every visit, staff will wear face shields, masks, clients also must wear a mask, and sanitize their hands upon entry, wear gloves when applicable, and appointments will be carefully scheduled to avoid overlaps, and disinfecting and sterilizing will be completed after each client."

"Unfortunately, we have had to take away the luxury of offering magazines, books, games, coffee, tea and hot chocolate to our clients, and will only be offering bottled water at this time," says Ms. McCabe. "We are asking only one guardian to come with their child to their appointment, under the age of 12, and only one child per guardian will be allowed in the salon at a time. We are prepared to conform to all standards set for our salon to reopen and return to serving our clients."

The esthetics owner says she is "very appreciative and thankful for the assistance through the support of the Town."

She says, "Once we are given the go ahead to open our doors, we are ready and we look forward to serving our clients in a safe, clean, caring atmosphere at 108 Main Street West."

A JOB WELL DONE: Jasmine McCabe and her sister Jade have worked hard to create a safe, creative space for Jasmine's clients at Enchanting Esthetics and More at 108 Main Street West in Shelburne.

County approves using reserves for courthouse repairs

Written By JAMES MATTHEWS

Dufferin council will dip into a reserve fund to cover extra costs required to repair the county's courthouse on Zina Street in Orangeville.

Councillor Bob Currie, Amaranth's mayor, said during a recent council meeting the price tag associated with transporting chimney bricks from overseas is one of the reasons for the cost over-run. The project requires an additional $70,795. Initially, the tender awarded to Clifford Restoration was pegged at $1,040,700.

County council agreed to use money from its Courthouse Capital Reserve.

"The bricks aren't here from Europe," said Coun. Currie. "And we're 70K short of the tender."

Work includes the design and construction to replace Courthouse chimneys, its slate roof repair, select architectural metal and wood restoration, and window repaint work. With design completed in 2019, construction is scheduled to start this year.

"It was an item in last year's budget," said Coun. Currie. "It wasn't done. Hopefully it will be done this year. But the bricks have to get from Europe over to Dufferin County."

The COVID-19 worldwide pandemic has delayed the project, which was planned before the health crisis.

Custom masonry to match the style and appearance of the existing Courthouse envelope was pre-ordered last year, well before the social distancing and social lockdowns that came into effect in March 2020.

The county requires contractors conform to best practices related to COVID-19 such as physical distancing. That may result in changes in scheduling and project sequencing. Supply chains have been and will continue to feel impacts of the pandemic.

It's anticipated the bricks will be delivered in July.

"I feel it should be the chimneys that are completed first, before we do the roof," Coun. Currie said. "When the chimneys, what's there now, are dismantled ... if a few bricks fall on the roof and that's specialized material, you're going to have to do the roof over again."

Shelburne Vets lacrosse team awaiting direction from OLA

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

The Ontario Lacrosse Association – the governing body for the sport in the province – has mandated that all in-person activities are prohibited until after July 1, however that doesn't mean lacrosse teams will be back on the floor any time soon.

Even if restrictions on playing the sport are lifted, they won't have any place to play.

Most municipalities across the province have stopped accepting booking of facilities at least until September and there is a reasonable chance that date may be extended further.

Even if facilities open in the fall, lacrosse clubs across the province won't be able to play at that time as most venues will be putting in the ice to get ready for hockey season.

The Shelburne Vets Lacrosse Club runs a series of divisions from paperweights up to the Midget division.

There has been no activity with the Club since March when the OLA made the decision to postpone or cancel all lacrosse training and meetings.

Only two sports – tennis and golf – have been given the green light in Ontario to proceed with club activities.

However sports which include close contact between players, and that includes lacrosse, are a ways off from being back in operation.

"We are presently awaiting word from the OLA who have extended again their decision until June 15, with a final of July 1, as deadline for any lacrosse to happen," said Shelburne Vets club president Barry Trood.

As with most sports, rules and regulations are made in the big leagues and information and new procedures trickle down to the minors who generally follow suit.

"The Canadian Lacrosse Association has cancelled all national box lacrosse championships for this season already," Mr. Trood explained. "The Major Lacrosse League (Senior A), Senior B, and Junior C have already cancelled their season. Zone 8 minor, which is the Guleph Kitchener Brantford area, have also cancelled as well. I personally don't see any season happening this year but we are awaiting an official word from the OLA."

Even if restrictions are lifted, the very nature of arenas in Ontario will put any lacrosse activity on the back burner as far as sports go.

When, and if, things are up and running again after the summer, the arenas teams play in will have ice in the them meaning there would be a lot of competition for any venues suitable for lacrosse practice and training.

With September being the traditional start for hockey, and many lacrosse players also play hockey, the transition to winter sports will likely see the lacrosse season have an empty record book this year.

Junior level lacrosse has already been cancelled this year and will hopefully get back up and running for training in the winter months prior to the 2021 season.

Ontario soccer association planning 'phased in' approach to summer sport

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

Ontario Soccer, the governing body of the sport in Ontario, says there will be a 'phased in' approach to the return of soccer in Ontario this summer that is being prepared at both the national and provincial level.

Currently each provincial or territorial Soccer Association is working on a specific 'Return to Play Guide' that will include safety protocols and recommendations.

The guides will include subjects that clubs must comply with as directed by national soccer authorities as well as by medical authorities at the provincial and territorial level.

Ontario Soccer plans to finalize their guide this week and it will be submitted to Canada Soccer for review.

As each province submits a guided, it will be reviewed nationally. Guides will be designed to protect the health and safety of participants in the sport.

Each club in a district must then be cleared and approved to play before getting back out on the soccer pitches.

At the present time in Ontario, there is not yet any indication of a time-line for the return to the sport, however, there is some expectation that a decision will be made some time in June.

The Shelburne Soccer Club has hopes of getting back out on the soccer pitches in July, however, they still must wait for directives before starting games this summer.

"Keeping with the current news, Ontario has reached the peak earlier than anticipated successfully flattening the curve through social distancing, said Shelburne Soccer Club president, Chris Valade, through an on-line video on the Club's Facebook page. "With this in mind, we are confident our soccer season will commence in July with a full ten weeks of play through august and September."

The Club has made accommodations for those who may have difficulty paying registration fees due to the current situation.

Soccer fields are currently open, but only for those who are family members and for recreational use.

Large groups of people are still not allowed to congregate on any town property.

Baseball season may yet be salvaged

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

Baseball may still have a sporting chance this summer.

The Ontario Baseball Association is still monitoring the COVID-19 situation and waiting for a directive from the provincial government on how to proceed with games this summer.

The OBA originally postponed early season tryouts and was waiting for May 1, to make a decision on what to do next. As that date passed, the temporary cancellation of all baseball activities was extended.

Currently the OBA is looking at June 15, as a go date – although that is only a goal and may yet again be pushed back

"Baseball Ontario remains committed to the safety of the baseball community," the organization said in a statement. "While the COVID-19 situation remains fluid, we are continuing to monitor the situation so that we can plan, prepare and respond accordingly. At this time and based on the guidelines of the provincial government and public health authorities, the suspension of all in-person baseball programs remains in effect through June 15, 2020. We will be providing an update on the work of the Safe Sport Committee is doing to prepare return to train / return to play, guidelines. The return to baseball can begin once municipal and provincial regulations permit the resumption of baseball activities. These requirements will differ from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, so it is important that everyone be well versed on the local directives as they take priority over any recommendation or guidelines from Baseball Ontario."

Players can get some practice in during this time, however, just not with teammates.

The Province announced that the use of batting cages can resume as part of the re-opening phase. This is part of the attempt to have a gradual reintroduction to sporting activities.

The ban on groups of people continues so having a team practice or tryouts is not being considered. The current situation affects thousands of minor baseball players across Ontario.

The OBA is in contact with member clubs across the province and is keep executive members informed of progress being made.

"We keep the shelves fully stocked and clean," said Kirk Reardone of the challenge at Shelburne Foodland during the current COVID-19 crisis. "We try to keep the shelves full. We are keeping up with demand and the whole social distancing situation."

Kirk and rest of the team at Foodland are working hard to provide the services and groceries we all need.

When he's not at work, Kirk enjoys keeping busy. After moving into a new home he has been spending time getting his new digs in order as well as "gardening, hiking, and just being outside."

Shelburne Police Service - save our other community heroes

We all are affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. While we are 'social distancing' during this period of COVID-19, we give thanks to all those who protect us from this most horrific disease.

The Shelburne Police Services are at risk of being lost... Again.

Please remember that our community is protected by our local police service. Safety and security are paramount to our community and our local police service provides the public with policing services that are aligned and integrated with other local public services. The provision of local policing is specific to the needs of our community and citizens.

We must not forget that the existence of the Shelburne Police Service is being challenged by the mayor and members of Town Council as they will be 'seriously' considering the demise of our service for purely economic reasons.

Town Council's decision to transition to the OPP is just around the corner and will take place after the OPP present their proposal possibly in June or July 2020. To confirm 'key' date(s) please contact Denyse Morrissey, CAO, or Jennifer Willoughby, Clerk, at 519-925-2600.

As a citizen you need to speak up again to let Town Council know how you feel about retaining the Shelburne Police Service. Write, call, email or text them today!

Town Council has been very evasive, and in my opinion not very straightforward with the public. They have taken an approach which is hurtful to it's citizens when Town Council hasn't the respectful decency to put all the facts on the table. Town Council's inadequate communication skills will be evident at the next election in 2022.

An example of Council's political manner is that they have not questioned staff when they reported the costs for the retention of our police service.

The CAO's report dated January 20, 2020 listed all costs in the first year. Why could the increase in supervision and staffing not be phased in over years as has been the past practice? The issues of increased supervision and the police facility are not new and were discussed with past Police Services Boards. These decisions are made by the Police Services Board in consultation with Town Council.

We must let our Town Council know how we value and support our Shelburne Police Service. Please express your support by email, text or phone calls.

Shelburne - this is your last chance before Town Council puts the nail in the coffin!

Let's keep our 'Community Heroes' here to serve and protect us.

Shameful attitudes

He crossed the ocean into Canada, likely at his own expense, and was sent straight to 14 days of isolation. He will not see his family, maybe for years. Being interviewed on our airway he said it is ok if that is the way to protect the Canadian people.

Folks like him are to most people just temporary foreign workers.

Another set of people crossed the ocean, apparently at the cost of taxpayers, returning to Canada from vacation, perhaps, and were sent to 14 days of isolation. They found it unreasonable and unbearable to be asked to spend time with their families in fine Canadian hotels with cable, flat screen TV, smart phones, room service and relaxation, for the protection of the Canadians. The good taxpayers had to quickly send them kits containing games, fun and play things.

Isn't it just easy to uproot the destitute from their families to come serve the highly privileged, and very hard to please?

Is this how the history books on the shelves keep history in the present?

Some were always considered right for rough, hard and laborious drudgery while others are valued for being oh so delicate and fit for luxuries.

Gloria Rannath

Let's start a conversation

I watched on television yesterday as the police chief of Minneapolis told the interviewer that the three police officers of his police department who stood around and did nothing to prevent the death of George Floyd, were all complicit in his murder - by their silence and inaction. This made me think about my own silence and inaction on racism too.

As an older white man of privilege I realize I have been wrong in being silent all these years and I want to make up for that now.

A young black woman in Toronto fell 24 floors to her death while in the presence of a number of police officers last week, who went to see her on a 'wellness check'. Her name is Regis Korchinski-Paquet.

The police are, perhaps, not the best trained in conversing with people who are going through mental health issues and their presence sometimes seems not to help. But how do we provide the necessary help for people in stress and in need in situations such as these?

I am wondering if there are people out there who may wish to join me in a conversation on these issues in our own community? I say this because I have only lived in Dufferin County for the last 5 years, but I have noticed that the face of this mainly-white community has changed a lot in a very short period of time. I think there may be a need for ordinary people to come together to try and help prevent the type of problems we have seen in the news from happening here.

So I wish to invite you to a conversation - from the many newcomers who now call this place home to the people who have called Dufferin County home for generation upon generation. Discussions will be respectful and inclusive. We are limited these days in how we are able to meet but many of us are now becoming quite familiar with Zoom!

Please me know if you would like to be part of this conversation for change, by e-mailing me at jeff.thespian@gmail.com

I hope many of you will be in touch!

Dufferin-Caledon region to see $12 million investment to rural broadband infrastructure

The work to be carried out in Dufferin County and Caledon is part of the Ontario government's Broadband and Cellular Action Plan, which is expected to generate up to $1 billion in broadband investment across the province over the next five years. Approximately 220,000 homes and businesses stand to benefit from the project.

Dufferin County Warden Darren White has often spoke of the need to expand broadband services across the region during his time on county council. Following Monday's announcement, he was understandably pleased to hear his community stands to benefit to the tune of more than $5 million.

"Dufferin County is happy to have the Province of Ontario as a partner and driving force behind the SWIFT program. We are glad to have partners that understand now, more than ever, that access to reliable, resilient and strong rural broadband is a necessity in rural Ontario," Mr. White said.

SWIFT is expected to award contracts and formalize agreements with service providers in July.

Our brewmaster, Andrew Kohnen, threw away a successful career in logistics to pursue his dream of reconnecting with the brewing roots of his family. This carried him to the UK's prestigious Brewlab in Sunderland, England, where he procured the alchemy that would drive his signature brewing style.

He took what he could from there and ventured to Scotland, Cornwall, and ultimately to Krefeld, Germany, working in the same brewery that had belonged to his ancestors. He came home to Canada for Hockley.
