Kyle Seeback gets re-elected locally

Written By Sam Odrowski

Over 66,000 ballots were cast in the Dufferin-Caledon riding on Monday and the results are in - Conservative incumbent Kyle Seeback will serve a second term.

Seeback won with 46.1 per cent of the vote (30,430), while Liberal candidate Lisa Post saw 32.5 per cent (21,464), followed by NDP candidate Samantha Sanchez with 10.1 per cent (6,668), and Anthony Zambito at 6.8 per cent (4,469).

When looking at the overall result, Trudeau is projected to maintain a minority government with 158 seats, while the Conservatives hold 119, Bloc Quebecois holds 32, NDP hold 25 and Greens hold two, according to preliminary results.

A total of 170 seats are needed to form a majority government.

Following the tallying of the local riding's results, Seeback took a moment to reflect on his re-election.

"Thank you to the residents of Dufferin-Caledon for once again placing their trust and confidence in me for a second term," he said. "I'm humbled by the support shown to me by my constituents from end to end of this riding. I'm looking forward to building on the progress we've made on many issues important to our community."

The issues that Seeback remains committed to moving forward include the swift expansion of rural broadband locally, supporting small businesses, supporting the agricultural community, and ensuring seniors are properly looked after.

He added that he's proud of his campaign team's dedication to sharing the Conservative's vision with the riding.

"I'm incredibly proud of what we achieved together over the last five weeks. It was a strong, positive, campaign that remained firmly focussed on the issues important to residents," said Seeback.

"Dufferin-Caledon can continue to count on me to be a strong, effective voice for our community and will work hard to bring people together. My priorities are the priorities of my constituents, always making myself accessible, and delivering real results. This is the representation my constituents want and deserve."

Meanwhile, List Post said while she didn't win locally, she's pleased to see that her party will continue to represent Canadians nationally, under Trudeau.

"I think that there's some really important initiatives that need to be brought forward for Canadians, and although I don't get to represent Dufferin-Caledon in the house this time around, I'm sure hopeful that some of those things are going to move forward and be really great for all of our community," said Post.

She told the Citizen she's very proud of the campaign that her team ran, noting it was very inclusive and focused on engaging youth, while providing a worthwhile experience to everyone involved.

"Campaigns are nasty. Campaigns are absolutely nasty and vicious, and we worked really hard to stay clean, to stay above board, to make sure that everybody who took the time to volunteer for our campaign had a positive experience," said Post.

"We worked our butts off. We knocked on doors every single day. We talked to as many residents as we could. We stood and listened, and had really open conversations about some of the things that our community needs that they're not getting."

The best part of campaigning locally, according to Post, was knocking on doors and having meaningful conversations with the residents of Dufferin-Caledon.

"Seeing that I could inspire them or that me being able to listen to them gave them hope," she said. "Being able to have that feeling is like nothing else in the world."

Local family shares significance of Terry Fox Run

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

The annual Terry Fox Run jogged on for its 41st year this past Sunday and while the event was much quieter than previous years, a local family made sure to continue the tradition.

Clad in Terry Fox Run sweaters and t-shirts, the Wallace family marked the second consecutive 'virtual' run with two 5 km walks among family. Since 2009, the Wallace's have been organizing the Terry Fox Run in Shelburne with family matriarch Joan Wallace, a cancer survivor, leading the way.

"The Terry Fox Run is so important to my family and many others who have faced cancer," said Dianna Wallace, co-organizer of the local Terry Fox Run. "Everybody is always very excited to do the Terry Fox Run because we believe that we can make a difference. With COVID, we're not getting the same energy as we would normally, but for my family it's such a big emotional event for us, and thankfully we're on the happy side of it."

In 1978, at the same time that Terry Fox was facing his fight with cancer, Joan Wallace was facing her own. Diagnosed with stage 4 non-Hodgkin Lymphoma and ovarian cancer, she underwent radiation therapy in 1978, chemotherapy in 1979, and numerous surgeries.

In an email to the Free Press Joan recalled watching Terry begin his Marathon of Hope on the morning news, and seeing him dip his artificial leg in the Atlantic Ocean.

"We followed his Marathon with great interest and admiration. I felt such a connection with Terry, as we were both struggling to survivor cancers," said Joan.

As family members began participating in the Terry Fox Run over the years, Joan Pictured are Joan and Bob Wallace and their five grandchildren participating in the annual run. The photo on the right shows Taylor, Dianna, and Joan, who have also been leading the local Shelburne Terry Fox Run for over a decade. became more active with the event herself.

"The Terry Fox Run is my passion. The fact that the Terry Fox Foundation researches so many different cancers, not just a few, but cancers I have had, and other family members and friends, inspires me," said Joan.

Despite the low-key celebration of the Terry Fox Run over the last two years with a virtual run, the Wallace's have worked to continue the event locally.

"I feel like it is something we need to do. Everyone knows someone that has had cancer, someone that lost their battle, and the ones that have survived – it literally affects everyone," Ian Wallace, Joan's son tells the Free Press about their participation each year.

"I have participated in the Terry Fox Run for all of my 16 years of life and will continue always. I like to support this cause for family and friends that have been touched by cancer," said Trent, Joan's grandson. Trent has made donations with money earned through his lawn care business in honour of his grandmother.

"I have been doing the Terry Fox Run with my family for 12 years now. It inspires me to watch my Grandma Wallace participate in the Terry Fox Run every year because she is a cancer survivor," said granddaughter Kiera, 12. "We all know someone that has fought cancer and or unfortunately lost their battle. I love walking to support them and raise money for cancer research."

Members from Active Lives, a day program for adults with exceptionalities and special needs, also took part in the 2021 Terry Fox Run raising over $750 for the cause.

Shirley Anderson, supervisor at the Shelburne campus, said participating in the 2021 Terry Fox Run was a way for the adults of Active Lives Day Program to become further involved with community initiatives, and adds that they're hoping to increase their involvement for more community initiatives in the future.

In 2018, after almost a decade of running the event, Joan stepped down as organizer passing the torch the daughter-in-law's, Dianna and Taylor.

"I just thought, I can't let this go into anyone else's hands. We need to do this for Joan, Terry, family and friends, and everyone affected by this awful disease," said Dianna.

"I have learned so much from Joan about why we need to #tryliketerry every year. I'm honoured to be able to continue her hard work and show my family that if everyone try's we can carry on Terry's Legacy," said Taylor.

The Town of Shelburne has raised over $65,000 for the Terry Fox Run since the 1980s and donations for this year are still being totalled.

With the 2021 Terry Fox Run completed, the Wallace's said they are looking to have even more participation from the community members and businesses next year.

"The excitement and enthusiasm that participants bring out with them is such a warm and cozy feeling. It brings tears to my eyes each and every year we do this event," said Dianna. "The love and care that everyone shows to our community is inspiring."

Town turns to community for feedback on off-leash dog park

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

The Town of Shelburne in turning to local residents for their opinions on an off-leash dog park in the community, and in the meantime has chosen not to implement a temporary location.

Shelburne Town Council during their meeting on Sept. 13 received a report from CAO Denyse Morrissey regarding potential locations, costs, and amenities associated with an off-leash dog park. Council voted to refer the off-leash park to the Town's parks and recreation master plan for community feedback.

"The Fiddle Park plan of the parks and recreation master plan is underway so we'll have that data with respect to the number of members of the community that would like to see an off-leash park or what people would like to see; there's a significant checklist of amenities that you would want to consider," said Morrissey. "We probably will know that by early Q1 2022."

Shelburne staff, in the report to council, considered four locations for the off-leash dog park –KTH Park, Simon Street Park, Greenwood Park, and four spaces within Fiddle Park.

"We evaluated each one and determined that Fiddle Park was the most preferred location," said Morrissey.

The locations for the off-leash dog park were evaluated under five criteria, including existing use, which Morrissey noted as one of the most important considerations in choosing the location.

At KTH Park, an off-leash dog park would see the elimination of the existing soccer field, while at Simon Street Park it would block the existing hill used for tobogganing, and at Greenwood Park would impact the splash pad, and proposed soccer fields.

While Fiddle Park has been chosen as the preferred location with its 33 acres of open space, Morrissey added there will be elimination of its existing uses, such as holding events, as well.

"In every single one of the placements there will be displacement of an existing use or it could change the ability for any use to be considered through the master plan process," said Morrissey. "Which is why it's recommended that while that is the preferred location, it's much better to allow the consultation to be undertake."

Other locations in Town were not evaluated due to their lack of meeting base criteria for the off-leash dog park.

The cost of the off-leash dog park is estimated to be around $92,000 with fencing ($53,000), signage ($2,000), trees and seating ($5,000), water access ($3,000), shade structure ($15,000), and accessibility with parking and pathways ($17,000).

The estimated budget for the dog park does not include operational costs for annual maintenance. The park is assumed to be open year round (12 months) from dawn to dusk and not open when it is dark. Operating related costs will be included in the draft 2022 operating budget.

In November 2019 town council directed staff to allocate $20,000 from the future parks and rec reserve levy for the dog park, and $60,000 is available from development charges to cover $80,000 of the estimated cost, meaning there is a shortfall of $12,000.

Morrissey said the $12,000 can be made up through allocating the amount from the 2022 parks and rec levy, similar to what was previously approved by council, or through community fundraising initiatives.

"Some community members might not realize the price tag that is involved with this," said Coun. Lindsay Wegener. "Even myself, $92,000 was more than I was expecting. It may change some community member's minds whether or not they actually do still feel that this is an asset to the town."

A survey for the Fiddle Park plan has been launched by the town, and can be found at www.haveyoursayshelburne.ca.

Kyle Seeback gets re-elected locally

Looking ahead to 2023, she said she'd be eager to run again as a Liberal in Dufferin-Caledon.

"I won't stop fighting for the community, no matter what happens next, win or lose. It's all about fighting for the people, so I'll keep doing that in whatever capacity I can," said Post.

Dufferin Caledon's NDP candidate Samantha Sanchez, who also ran federally for the very first time, said she's pleased with her party's performance, as it's poised to make small gains.

She told the Citizen her reason for wanting to run under the NDP banner was because of their proposed policies that are geared towards supporting everyday Canadians.

"I believe in making everything affordable. I just graduated school, so when I was reading their [the NDP's] platform about doing the debt forgiveness program, it was something that really called out to me," said Sanchez. "I am a recent lawyer, I just got called and I've accumulated a lot of debt in over the years with my degrees and stuff."

When looking at her local campaign, she noted that she didn't announce her candidacy until just three weeks ago and didn't get very many opportunities to engage in voter outreach.

Looking ahead to the next federal election in two years, Sanchez said she'll consider running again.

Meanwhile, Jenni Le Forestier, who ran for the Green Party, said she was disappointed with the results of Monday night's federal election.

While she's happy to see Green MP Mike Morrice won the Kitchener-Centre seat she said much more work needs to be done to send more Green MPs to Ottawa.

Over the past few weeks, since the election was called, Le Forestier noted that many important issues were pushed aside and it became more of a referendum on COVID-19 vaccine policies.

"I think that was another big distraction in the election," she told the Citizen. "That was disappointing to see."

Instead, Le Forestier said she would have liked to see more of a focus on the climate change, housing prices, and overall affordability.

However, she is pleased with how her campaign went in Dufferin-Caledon.

"We were able to make the case for our local biosphere and for water security, and for all of the environmental issues that are near and dear to me," said Le Forestier. "I think we brought a level of basic awareness to the environmental issues that would not have been there otherwise, so I'm very proud of that."

Looking ahead to 2023 when the next election is slated, Le Forestier said she'll consider putting her name forward again as a Green Party candidate.

Anthony Zambito was unavailable for comment in time for print.

Shelburne Farmer Market wraps up for season

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

The Shelburne Farmer's Market officially wrapped for the summer season last Thursday (Sept. 16).

"It's been a fantastic season, we've had about 20 to 25 vendors each date, and a lot of folks have come out here and supported the market. We're really grateful for that," said Alexandra Georgie, a volunteer organizer for the market.

The Shelburne Farmer's Market kicked off the 2021 season in early June, with vendors from across Dufferin County including farmers and artisans taking part. The market, which was held every third week at Owen Sound Street and First Ave., returned after a small group of local volunteer banded together to revive it after its cancellation in 2020.

Diedra Cruwys is the owner of The Weehomestead, a booth at the market which sells honey as well pure beeswax candles, wax melts and homemade soaps, and 2021 marked her first time as a vendor at the Shelburne Farmer's Market.

"Being that it was my first time, I think I had a fantastic year. I really liked this market because it's my local market, and I think they've done a fantastic job keeping things safe and moving," said Cruwys.

LAST MARKET: Shelburne Farmers Market vendors celebrated the last market of the 2021 season last Thursday (Sept. 16). The market made its return in early June running every third week, at Owen Sound Street and First Ave. Organizers of this year's market are already making plans for the 2022 Shelburne Farmers Market BusyLizzy, was also a first time vendor at the local market.

"I didn't know what to expect, but it was really good. I loved that there was a nice combination of families coming out and singles and couples and young people and older people, it was just so lovely. My expectations were met and exceeded," said Glenday.

With a sunny day to mark the end of the season, around 200 farmer's market goers visited the local event within the first hour.

Robyn Hagyard is a former vendor with the Shelburne Farmer's Market, and told the Free Press throughout the summer she regularly attended the market with her children.

"There's a booth for everyone. They just went and got a cupcake, my daughter gets all her little things like a new key chain or last time it was earrings, and we get our dinner from the falafel place, so it's perfect," said Hagyard.

While the market was held every third week, market goers told the Free Press they'd like to see the market on a more regular basis.

"I would have liked to see it more often, but they've got beautiful products here," said local resident, Liz Harris. "It has the potential for more growth."

Although the Farmer's market is closing for the season, Georgie says the group is hoping to bring it back for the 2022 season.

Georgie said the committee that organized this year's market will be approaching both the local BIA and Shelburne Town Council in hopes of having an individual hired to manage the market.

"This year was only every three weeks because it was volunteer based, but if we can find someone in a hired position, we'll hopefully be able to do it weekly again from the 2022 season," said Georgie.

Work for Town of Shelburne master plan well underway

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

The Town of Shelburne's parks and recreation master plan is officially underway.

Shelburne Town council, during their meeting on Monday (Sept. 13), received and overview report from town planner Steve Wever, which provided details on how the plan will be developed.

The parks and recreation master plan is a framework that is meant to help identify facilities and services that are required in the community, where they should be provided, the timing of their development and how they can be delivered. The parks and recreation master plan spans a 10 year period.

"It's not just about adding new, it's obviously very much about renewal of existing [facilities]," noted Wever. "You have a number of older and aging parks and facilities that need to be considered."

According to the report to council existing parks and recreation facilities in the review include the CDRC and the outdoor pool, parks, open spaces, community trails, playgrounds, sports fields, basketball courts and multi-use courts, skatepark, park building such as pavilions and washrooms, and event spaces.

As part of the first phase of the parks and recreation master plan, the Town will be collecting information from the community through online surveys and workshops.

"Council is excited to announce that our Parks and Recreation Master Plan will soon be launching and will wrap up in Spring 2022. The last 18 months, as we all know, have not been easy. COVID 19 has really shown us that year-round access to outdoor opportunities in parks, and especially those that are free, have never been more important," said Wade Mills. "We know how important parks and recreation is to our community as a whole and that's why we are committed to enhancing and upgrading our parks and recreation opportunities."

The first facility the Town will be receiving feedback on is Fiddle Park, which will have its own plan developed separate to the master plan to identify future facilities and amenities the community wants.

"[Fiddle Park] is the largest park in the town and of course it's evolved with an event-based focus and specifically accommodation of camping needs," said Wever. "But, through the CIP and going back through previous planning initiatives and processes, it's been identified by many community members that there's a desire to have a broader range of community-oriented park use."

The Town launched an online survey on Sept. 13 for Fiddle Park which can be found at www.haveyoursayshelburne.ca.

After the first phase is completed, a draft plan will be development, with the third phase being the final master plan.

The development of the parks and recreation master plan is beginning this fall and is expected to wrap up in Spring 2022.

Construction scheduled for six municipal roadways

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

The Town of Shelburne will have a number of roads and intersections undergo resurfacing work beginning next week.

Six municipal roadways will be worked on as part of a program run by the Town annually, in order to maintain current infrastructure and address road conditions.

In a notice issued earlier this month, the Town said the work will include milling and removal of existing roadway material and the placement of new asphalt.

Roadways included in the resurfacing project including: Second Avenue East (William Street to Owen Sound Street intersection), Robert Street (Jelly Street North to 460 Robert Street), James Street North (Foodland Entrance to First Ave., including intersection), Sarah Court (end of cul-de-sac to James Street), Andrew Street (James Street to Dufferin Street), and Laneway (South of Main Street between Jelly Street and Dufferin Street).

As a result of the construction, the Town said there will be higher traffic in areas and there is a potential for noise to be heard related to construction during scheduled times.

Residents in the resurfacing locations were asked to remove their vehicles from the roadways prior to Sept. 13.

The resurfacing projects are scheduled to run from Sept. 27 until Oct. 15 and will occur during the hours of 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Residents with question regarding the resurfacing projects can contact Public Works co-ordinator, Joanne Marceau, at 519-925-2699 ext. 221 or at jmarceau@shelburne.ca.

Proclamation made for National Day of Truth and Reconciliation

Written By Sam Odrowski

Mayor Sandy Brown, on behalf of Council, declared Sept. 30 as the National Day of Truth and Reconciliation in the Town of Orangeville during last Monday's regular meeting.

"All of the difficult things that have been learned in the past several months regarding residential schools have been brought home here and we will be paying tribute, and remembering these issues on September 30th, which is not too far down the road," said Mayor Brown.

In June the federal government passed new legislation marking Sept. 30 as a national statutory holiday for the very first time, commemorating the tragic legacy of residential schools in Canada.

The establishment of a national holiday is the 80th call to action in the Truth and Reconciliation Commission report.

Sept. 30 also coincides with Orange Shirt Day, which was started in 2013 and has become a symbol to honour and commemorate the Indigenous children who were forced to attend residential schools.

After Merkel

Last January Angela Merkel's Christian Democrats (CDU) were ahead in the German opinion polls by fifteen points. She was stepping down after sixteen years as chancellor (prime minister), but she was still by far the most trusted politician in Germany. Indeed, she is universally known as 'Mutti' ('Mummy').

Yet by June the Greens had overtaken the CDU and were leading in the polls for the first time ever. Green Party leader Annalena Baerbock looked stunned by the turn of events, but it didn't last long. Allegations of plagiarism in her new book quickly punctured her balloon.

By this month, with national elections due on Sunday, it's the Social Democrats (SPD) who are well ahead of the pack, and party leader Olaf Scholz looks like a shoo-in as the next chancellor (prime minister). How to explain the high-speed churn? "You may as well cite chaos theory," said an SDP staffer.

But it's not really that mysterious. The election campaign has really been a search to identify which candidate can best fill the role of 'Mutti'.

The CDU's own candidate, Armen Laschet, proved too gaffe-prone for the job. (He was caught on camera laughing at some private joke while the president delivered a eulogy for the flood victims in a devastated Rhineland town.) So when the Green leader also flamed out, the mantle of front-runner draped itself around the shoulders of a quite surprised Olaf Scholz.

Olaf Scholz used to be known as 'Scholzomat' for his robotic delivery when speaking in public, or even the 'grinning Smurf' for his blue eyes and fixed smile. Then he had an "ideological detox" (his own words) that moved him well to the right in the Socialist Party.

That made him eligible for senior cabinet positions when the SPD went into coalition with the CDU in 2013, and for the last four years he has been Germany's finance minister. He got the new nickname of 'Bazooka Man' when he described his pandemic bail-out plan as "the big bazooka we need to get the job done," but he still wasn't seen as a likely candidate for chancellor.

Thanks mostly to the under-performance of his opponents, he has emerged over the past four months as the odds-on favourite for the chancellorship. Now his aides call him 'Lazarus', and one of his own campaign ads says bluntly "er kann Kanzlerin". That means "he can do the Chancellor's job" – but 'Kanzlerin' is the feminine form of the word.

He may never fill Mutti's sensible shoes, but he will probably be the leader of the second-biggest Western democracy for the next four years, so what he does in office will have an impact on many things beyond Germany.

German governments are almost always coalitions, so the first question is: who does Scholz form a coalition with? The probable answer is the 'traffic light coalition', so called because the traditional colours of the three parties involved – the SPD, the Free Democrats and the Greens – are red, yellow and green.

Such a government would be centre-left, but not very far to the left because the pro-business Free Democrats would be a brake on that. Scholz intends to raise the minimum wage to 12 euros an hour ($14), but promises no major redistribution of wealth.

The traffic-light coalition would be committed to fighting climate change, but its internal dynamics would prevent it from doing anything drastic like shutting down coal-fired power stations or imposing speed limits on motorways. The Merkel status quo would largely survive the transfer of power.

And if the electoral arithmetic turns out to work in the other direction and the CDU emerges as the biggest single party, nothing much changes either. The most plausible deal then would be the 'Jamaica coalition', after the colours of the Jamaican flag, but it just substitutes the CDU's black for the SDP's red. The other two parties would remain the same.

In other words, much commotion but not much change – which is, in fact, what almost everybody who isn't German would prefer. Germany has been a rock of stability in a world where many previously predictable countries have been breaking loose from their moorings: Modi in India, Brexit in Britain, Bolsonaro in Brazil, Xi in China, Trump in the United States.

Maybe Joe Biden can restore the United States to its traditional role as the guarantor of the status quo, but that remains to be seen – nor does everybody even want the status quo back. The tectonic plates will continue to shift, and nobody knows where we will all end up.

But it is reassuring that Europe, the principal source of wars for the past four centuries, remains a stable and relatively contented island of peace and prosperity. It owes that, in large measure, to the sane and undramatic politics of Germany.

Debt trap driven by COVID-19

The financial consequences of COVID-19 and the shutdown of economies are difficult to evaluate. But some of those consequences have begun to appear and could hinder economic recovery.

Inflation is one of these harmful consequences. In the United States, consumer prices jumped 4.2 per cent in the 12 months through to April, up from 2.6 per cent in March, marking a considerable increase since September 2008.

The same trend is happening in Canada, where inflation rose to 3.4 per cent in April, up from 2.2 per cent in March, the highest level since May 2011.

Inflation can occur when the money supply increases faster than economic growth. For economist Milton Friedman, "inflation is always and everywhere a monetary phenomenon in the sense that it is and can be produced only by a more rapid increase in the quantity of money than in output."

When a central bank prints too much money, that money loses its value. In some countries, profound effects are already present: in Turkey, food inflation jumped by more than 20 per cent in a year after its central bank's bond-buying program drove its currency to record lows. Similar situations have occurred in Latin American countries like Argentina.

These situations can lead to hyperinflation – high and accelerating inflation. One of the recent and the most famous instances occurred in Venezuela. In the face of economic difficulties, the government chose to print more money. This contributed to hyperinflation. The same phenomenon happened in Zimbabwe in the early 2000s. In both countries, the strategy to print money was linked to high governments debt. The need to repay that debt and the mismanagement of national finances can be blamed.

This situation hasn't occurred in Western countries during the pandemic because their economies were more robust before the crisis. But even if hyperinflation isn't a concern for those nations, its appearance elsewhere shows the danger of manipulating the money supply. And even minor inflation can hinder economic recovery.

In Canada, according to Equifax, per capita consumer debt declined amid reduced spending activity. If the overall consumer debt has risen due to mortgage balances, household indebtedness fell due to the COVID-19 crisis.

In September 2020, Statistic Canada reported a 10.8 per cent increase in household disposable income. This increase, coupled with a 13.7 per cent decline in household spending (in nominal terms), pushed the household saving rate to 28.2 per cent from 7.6 per cent in the previous quarter and 3.6 per cent in the fourth quarter of 2019.

Numerous factors can explain this situation:

- Lockdowns reduce the opportunities for consumers to spend.
- The future uncertainty caused by the pandemic could lead to more prudent behaviour from households, encouraging saving over spending.
- The Canada Emergency Response

Benefit (CERB) provided many people with income from the federal government in response to the restrictions and economic crisis.

So the government is spending more and households are saving more. This shows that the state is becoming more active in the economy and in managing its debt.

To deal with the COVID-19 crisis, the government has relied on debt and redistributed money to people through subsidies.

The problem is that government money is taxpayer money, so the burden of debt (and the future tax burden) will be costly for citizens, even if they receive financial help from the government.

The COVID-19 crisis has allowed governments to take a more important place in the economy, mainly using debt with help from central banks.

The shock of COVID-19 can explain this behaviour, but we must be wary of the risk of abuse.

North Dufferin Baseball League senior championship underway

Written By Brian Lockhart

It may have been a short season, but the intensity in the North Dufferin Baseball League's senior championship has not waned at all.

The Bolton Brewers are up against the New Lowell Knights in the quest to claim the Strother Cup and the 2021 senior title.

There was no championship awarded last year when the season was cancelled due to the pandemic.

The Brewers have taken a two-game lead in the series after the teams played the opening games over the weekend.

Fall ball can be a little dicey when it comes to weather, but both days had perfect sunny skies making for a good afternoon for the games.

The final series kicked off in Bolton on Saturday, September 18, with a 1:00 p.m. start.

The Brewers and Knights finished off the regular season with identical 8 - 2 records and a very close 'runs for' and 'runs against' record. Fans knew this was going to be a hard fought series and they weren't disappointed with the quality of play on the field.

New Lowell scored in the first inning of game one for a 1 - 0 lead.

From there, it was a real pitcher's duel with a quality performance from both sides.

Batters were getting on base, but neither team could do much to advance and score.

Several innings went scoreless as both teams tried to advance runners with little success.

The Brewers tied the game in the sixth. In Bolton's half of the seventh, with two out, Drew Volkey walked, stole second, and then scored when an error was made on a throw to first base ending the game with a 2-1 win for the Brewers.

PLAYOFF SERIES: The Bolton Brewers and the New Lowell Knights meet on the diamond in Bolton on Saturday, September 18, for game one of the North Dufferin Baseball League senior championship series. The Brewers took one game one after taking the lead in the seventh inning for a 2-1 win. The teams met the following day in New Lowell for game two. The Brewers came out on top in that game with a 4 - 1 win and now lead the best-of-five series 2 - 0.

Bolton. He pitched seven innings, allowed one run on 12 hits, walked one, hit one batter, and struck out six.

Steve Baldry pitched 6 2/3 innings for the Knights, allowed two runs on three hits, walked four and struck out seven.

The teams were back at it the following day, when they met at the diamond in New Lowell for game two of the series.

Again the Knights were held to a single run for the game.

The Brewers scored four to take the win and move ahead 2-0 in the series.

The teams will get a week off before meeting again this coming weekend for the third game in the series.

Game three will take place in Bolton on Saturday, September 25.

The first pitch is scheduled for 1:00 p.m.

If the Brewers are successful, the season will be over. If the Knights prevail the series will move to game four.

Game four is scheduled to take place in Bolton on Sunday, September 26, with a 2:00 p.m. start.

Some high school sports will be allowed this fall

Written By Brian Lockhart

Some high school athletes will be able to take part in inter-school athletics this year, however, some indoor sports will likely either not take place or will continue with restrictions.

"We recognize the importance of inter-school athletics to student well-being and positive mental health, and we are excited that inter-school sports will be permitted," the Upper Grand District School Board said in a statement, regarding District 10 and District 4 athletics in Orangeville and Shelburne.

The school board has been working in consultation with Wellington-Dufferin-Guelph Public Health as well as other partners in education, to determine the best way to proceed with high school sports this year.

Beginning September 7, only outdoor fall inter-school sports are permitted to begin training and practices. All activities must follow WDGPH guidelines provided to schools.

Inter-school fall sports including competitions, games, and matches will be delayed until at least, October 4, to allow athletic directors and district conveners the opportunity to review Ministry, OPHEA, school board, and WDGPH guidelines.

Depending on how the schools will proceed, this opens the door for some sports including soccer, field hockey, and rugby, which are typically played in the fall season.

Some other outdoor sports including track and field and cross-country usually take place in the spring.

Regarding indoor sports, the school board said, "Indoor fall inter-school sports have not been cancelled, however, they are not to begin until further notice."

Typically, this includes girls and boys basketball, volleyball, and badminton.

The statement did not clarify if schedules will go ahead with the usual number of games for a season or if the season will be shortened this year. District 10 includes Orangeville District Secondary School as well as schools from the Guelph area.

District 4 includes Centre Dufferin District High School and other schools from towns to the west.

Shelburne Cricket Club plans more games to promote the sport

Written By Brian Lockhart

The Shelburne Cricket Club is planning a few more games before the snow flies to promote their sport in the area.

The Club had a short season in their inaugural year, and held a special best-of-seven tournament between the Shelburne Knights and the Shelburne Gladiators over the summer.

That tournament ended on September 5, with the Knights coming out on top in the final game to win the season championship.

It was an exciting tournament that saw back and forth wins and the series going the full seven games to produce a championship team.

After the success of their opening season, the Club has decided to go ahead with some more matches to promote the sport in the area and hopefully bring in some new players and just create some interest in the sport locally.

The Club has reached out to other Cricket Clubs in the region to set up some exhibition matches at KTH Park in Shelburne.

There is no actual cricket pitch at the park, but the Club has managed to utilize the open field to make it workable for games.

The first exhibition game will feature the Shelburne Stars taking on the visiting Barrie Royals.

That game is scheduled for Sunday, September 26, with a 12:00 p.m. start.

The second game will feature the Stars hosting the CPG XI team, from the Corporate Cricket Premier League.

The game is slated for Sunday, October 3, and will get underway with an 11:00 a.m. start.

Both matches will be broadcast live on the Club's Facebook page.

Shelburne Cricket Club president, Ahsen Siddiqui, has been working hard all year to promote the sport in Dufferin County.

Mr. Siddiqui said they are hoping to convince the town to build a permanent cricket field in the area. So far, they have been using KTH Park as the home base for the games as it provides enough space to play the games with temporary markers used to create the boundaries for the game.

Man charged for illegal turkey hunting

The Ontario government would like to remind hunters that wild turkey hunting regulations such as firearms restrictions and the requirement for licences are in place to help sustain the wild turkey populations.

Paul Girard of Gravenhurst pleaded guilty to hunting turkey without a licence and was fined $2,000. He also pleaded guilty to an additional count of hunting turkey without a licence, two counts of transporting illegally obtained wildlife and two counts of using a firearm to hunt turkey that is not permitted by regulations; he received a suspended sentence. The firearm was seized and forfeited to the Crown.

The court heard that in May 2021, a conservation officer began the investigation after becoming aware that Girard allegedly harvested two wild turkeys in the Gravenhurst area without a licence. The investigation found that Girard shot two turkeys in May of 2020 on a friend's property. In addition to not having a licence for either bird, the investigation further revealed that Girard was using a shotgun not permitted by regulations.

Justice of the Peace William Turtle heard the case in the Ontario Court of Justice, Bracebridge, on August 11, 2021.

DBOT holds Think Local Market with around 40 vendors

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

After postponing their vendors market last week for weather, the Dufferin Board of Trade (DBOT) officially held their Think Local Market.

"We are thrilled to finally see this event unfold," said Diana Morris, executive director of DBOT. "Many of our businesses haven't had the opportunity to get face to face with customers in 18 months, since COVID hit, so this event is really giving them the opportunity to get face to face with customers."

While the wind was blowing and dark clouds threatened a down pour of rain, the Think Local Market went ahead at Fiddle Park in Shelburne on Tuesday (Sept. 21) with around 40 vendors.

The Think Local Market was created from the Dufferin Board of Trade's annual "Think Local" showcase, which promotes local food and restaurants and was available only to DBOT members. Not being able to host the showcase over the last two years, DBOT expanded the event to include other industries within the community.

At the market on Tuesday, vendor items spanned from macramé and home décor, to food and baked goods, to soaps and sustainable products.

"The goal of this event is really to celebrate and promote all things made in Dufferin,"

THINK LOCAL VENDOR: The Dufferin Board of Trade (DBOT) held their Think Local Market at Fiddle Park in Shelburne on Sept. 21. The vendors market featured small businesses from across Dufferin County including macramé, food, baked goods, and home decor. The event also marked the soft launch of DBOT's most recent shop local campaign – Dufferin Days.

said Morris.

Darlene Moran is the owner of Décor by Darmora, a seasonal wreaths and décor business based in Shelburne and she used the market on Tuesday to sell a variety of her Halloween and autumnal themed wreaths.

As a new resident and business in the community this past year, she spoke about the importance of having a space for small local businesses.

"For so many of the small businesses in smaller communities, it's difficult to start selling online or expanding your business in that way, so events like this get your name, face and product out there," explained Moran.

Exposure to more customers was a sentiment shared by other vendors of small businesses at the market.

Rebecca Hudson is the owner of SOOP-bags a zero waste company focused on providing eco-friendly alternatives for single use plastics such as toothbrushes, deodorants and sandwich bags.

"COVID has really highlighted that small businesses can use the support. Small businesses often form a big part of the community, even if people don't really know we're here," said Hudson. "I wanted to be part of that making a presence in the small business community, uplifting brand names and getting more brand awareness."

The Think Local Market also marked the soft launch of the DBOT's most recent shop local campaigns – Dufferin Days.

Dufferin Days consists of three components – Play Local, Eat Local, and Love Local – each focusing on supporting a different sector in the community.

Local consumers will be able to submit a receipt and form during a specific time frame (21 days) for each component, and will be eligible for a prize draw.

Dufferin Days will run from now until the holiday season.

Headwaters Hospital holding Walk, Run, Ride event fundraiser

Written By PAULA BROWN
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

Headwaters Health Care Foundation (HHCF) is calling on the community to get active this month as part of a fundraiser for the local hospital.

The virtual Walk, Run, or Ride event is a fundraiser organized by the HHCF that hopes to raise urgent funds for critically needed equipment at the hospital while also giving community members the chance to explore our region.

"The government does not provide funding for hospital equipment [outside of large-scale capital buildings] so it is up to us to fund these equipment needs and provide excellent health care close to home," explained Kendra Goss, coordinator of community engagement, in a press release for the event.

A number of municipalities in Dufferin County are taking part in the challenge, including Amaranth, Grand Valley, Mono, Orangeville, and Shelburne. Residents are able to join their municipal team to help raise funds.

"This September, I would like to challenge the residents of Orangeville to join me in this year's Virtual Walk, Run, Ride for Headwaters. Let's work together to reach our fundraising goal in support of our hospital and front line workers," said Mayor Sandy Brown.

"The Staff and Council of the Township of Amaranth are thrilled to be supporting the virtual Walk, Ride, Run for Headwaters. We are encouraging all community members to get outside to make a difference for our local Hospital. Join Team Amaranth today and start raising funds to assist in the purchase of new or replacement equipment at Headwaters Health Care Centre," said Amaranth Mayor Bob Currie.

"I am delighted to see local municipalities participate in Walk, Ride, Run for Headwaters. As Captain of Team Mono, I encourage everyone to get involved to reach and exceed the fundraising goal. Let's show support for our healthcare workers and local hospital," said Mono Mayor John Creelman.

There is no registration fee, and no fundraising minimums to take part in the Walk, Run, Ride initiative.

RAISING THE FLAG: The new Mulmur flag was officially raised at Superburger on Sept. 18. The flag is part of a rebranding of the Township, with a focus on what local residents find meaningful of Mulmur.

Dufferin man wins $75,000 lottery

Romain Malinoski of Orangeville won a $75,000 prize with INSTANT POKER (Game #2261). The winning ticket was purchased at Circle K on First Street in Orangeville.

Romain says he plays the lottery all the time. "It's my thing – I love the $5 games," he shared while at the OLG Prize Centre in Toronto to pick up his winnings.

The 55-year-old father of one was relaxing in his garage and playing his ticket when he discovered his win. "I thought I won $1,000 or $5,000 at first. I checked it using the OLG App and I couldn't believe it!"

Romain told his wife and son the next morning. "My son thought I was joking," he laughed.

Romain plans to go to Hawaii with his wife.

OLG is currently booking in-person prize claim appointments at the OLG Prize Centre in Toronto only for those claims that require a face-to-face interview. Customers with prizes over $50,000 are asked to call 1-800-387-0098 to discuss available prize claim options. Prize claims up to $49,999.90 should continue to be submitted by mail. The health and safety of our customers and employees remains our top priority and OLG looks forward to providing future updates on the further availability of in-person prize claims.

INSTANT POKER is available for $3 a play and the top prize is $75,000. Odds of winning any prize are 1 in 3.21.
