Road 2 Recovery initiative makes stop at local Legion

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

The Shelburne Legion was a pitstop for a group of hikers this past weekend, who are making a grueling month long "ruck" to help raise funds to support homeless veterans.

The group of five, consisting of Lino Di Julio, Joey Dimauro, Dave Ward, Nathan Desborough, and Noel Grace, arrived at the local legion on Saturday (July 23) following a 25-kilometer day-long trek.

The men are hiking the Bruce Trail over the span of 34 days as part of the 9th annual Road 2 Recovery initiative organized by non-profit Ruck 2 Remember.

Starting the ruck on July 5, the team is hiking the 900 kilometer stretch of the Bruce Trail from Tobermory to Niagara, stopping at 20 Royal Canadian Legions and are expected to take their final steps on Aug. 6.

Rucking, also known as ruck marching, involves carrying a weighted pack on your back while walking or hiking. Di Julio told the Free Press that they each carry rucksacks that weigh between 40 to 45 pounds.

Funds raised through Ruck 2 Recovery trek go towards the Royal Canadian Legion charity, Operation: Leave the Streets Behind, which aims to help support veterans facing homelessness.

RUCK 2 REMEMBER: Noel Grace, Lino Di Julio, Joey Dimauro, Dave Ward, and Nathan Desborough stopped at the Shelburne Legion this past weekend as they take part in ruck along the Bruce Trail to raise funds and awareness to support veteran facing homelessness.

Di Julio founded the non-profit organization Ruck 2 Remember in July of 2014 as a way to give tribute to and support front line responders and military personnel. A civilian, Di Julio was unable to serve in the military due to his epilepsy.

During the inaugural event in 2014, volunteers rucked 158 bricks, each of which was engraved with the name of a Canadian soldier killed in Afghanistan, from Hamilton to Legion Hall in Parry Sound.

SHIP and Headwaters mourn loss of Louise Kindree

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Headwaters Health Care Centre (HHCC) and non-profit partner Services and Housing in the Province (SHIP) are mourning the loss of long-time board member and volunteer, Louise Kindree.

In a joint notice issued last Friday (July 22), Kim Delahunt, HHCC president and CEO, and Lesley Nagoda, chief executive officer for SHIP, gave remembrance to Kindree's many contributions with both organizations.

Kindree passed away on July 21 at the age of 75 following a short battle with cancer.

"It is with great sadness that we learned of the recent passing of Louise Kindree," read the joint notice. "We offer our deepest condolences to Louise's family, friends, and fellow volunteers. Louise will be greatly missed by all who knew her."

Kindree was an active member of Headwaters Health Care Centre's Board of Directors, the Headwaters Health Care Auxiliary and the Board of Directors with Services and SHIP.

LOUISE KINDREE: Services and Housing in the Province (SHIP) and Headwaters Health Care Centre (HHCC) are grieving the loss of Louise Kindree, a long-time board member and volunteer. She passed away on July 21 at the age of 75 following a short battle with cancer.

At Headwaters, Kindree served in various governance positions including director, chair and vice-chair of HHCC's board of directors starting in 2005. Most recently, she served on the governance committee of the board. For over 18 years, Kindree was a hospital-based volunteer with Headwaters Health Care Auxiliary.

She also chaired a local recruitment committee for physicians from 2005 to 2016, which saw the recruitment of 15 family physicians.

Kindree was chair of the Board of Peach Ranch from 2014 to 2017, and was instrumental in leading its amalgamation with SHIP in April 2017. She had served on SHIP's board of directors since 2017, most recently as chair.

Prior to retiring and volunteering actively in the community, Kindree worked for the federal government in Human Resources (recruitment, values, and ethics) for Health Canada and Environment Canada.

"A supportive, thoughtful, and insightful person, Louise greeted everyone she met with a smile and a twinkle in her eye. She cared deeply for the health and wellness of people in the community and never shied away from getting involved to help make a lasting difference," read the joint notice.

There will be no service or memorial. Kindree's final wish was that any donations in her memory go to Headwaters Health Care Foundation or SHIP.

The bricks were then incorporated into a monument.

In following years, the event became known as the Ruck 2 Recovery and was developed around rucking two kilometers for each military or first responder lost the year before. The ruck is typically between 150 km and 160 km and takes about four days.

Over eight years, Ruck 2 Remember has raised almost $500,000 to help keep veterans off of the streets. The money has helped over 1,070 veterans in more than 170 communities.

"We're really proud to be a part of the program and contribute to it financially," said Di Julio.

As they began to plan for the ninth annual Ruck to Remember, Di Julio said they were looking to see if there was a way, they could double the amount of money they had raised over the years, in just one year.

"We came up with Ruck the Bruce," explained Di Julio. "The Bruce Trail is one of those things that everybody kind of associates with the province so we thought that was great."

Operation: Leave the Streets Behind helps veterans through multiple stages of coming off the streets to help ensure they stay off the streets. It's a process that Di Julio notes is extremely expensive.

When asked what he hopes the fundraiser will lead to, Di Julio said, "We'd like to say that we would end veteran homelessness, but I don't know if that's an achievable goal."

He continued, "There are some people out there, who are veterans, and aren't ready to come off the streets and there's probably always going to be a percentage, but what we'd like to do is make sure that whenever we do find somebody ready to make that decision, that every tool and dollar is available to get them back on their feet."

The Shelburne Legion donated $500 from their poppy fund to the cause.

"It was a great opportunity to be a part of and to support them in their goal," said vice president, Dean Schroeder. "They're unbelievable guys doing a very difficult job and it's amazing that they stopped in and spent time with us and with our legion."

Donations can be made on the Road to Recovery: Ruck the Bruce GoFundMe page.

At the time of print, the initiative has raised over $121,000 of their half million goal.

Mulmur councillor seeking deputy mayor position

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Mulmur councillor Shirley Boxem has entered her name into the race for deputy mayor in the upcoming municipal election.

Boxem announced her candidacy in the municipal election, which is set to take place in the fall, in a press release on July 21.

"It has been an honour to serve as a councillor," said Boxem, in her candidacy announcement. "As deputy mayor, I will continue to be respectful of your precious tax dollars and vigilant in protecting this very special place we call home."

Boxem was among the group of councillors elected to the new Mulmur Council in the 2018 municipal election. Over the four-year term, Boxem worked on addressing issues of conservation and communication, holding an active role as the Mulmur representative on the board of the Nottawasaga Valley Conservation Authority (NVCA)

She also helped in the development of the Mulmur monthly newsletter instituted by the Communications Advisory Committee, which had a distribution of over 800.

"I envisioned a monthly newsletter shortly into my term. We need to be better connected to our ratepayers," she said. "We cannot rely on over-the-fence conversations to keep people in the know."

Outside of council, Boxem has previously served as a board member with North Dufferin Agricultural and Community Task-force (NDACT) and aided in the creation of Food & Water First.

As executive director of Headwaters Communities in Action, she oversaw Headwaters Food and Farming Alliances as well as the creation of DC MOVES, Volunteer Dufferin, and the Dufferin County Community Grants process. She has also played a supportive role in the development of the Dufferin Community Foundation (DCF).

She is currently a board director and member of the Outreach Committee.

While Boxem has not yet shared the specifics of her platform, she did note a focus on community and environment issues.

"With the pressures of development and growth, residents want a Mulmur that retains its countryside feel while allowing for economic opportunities and housing options. They want continued fiscal management, but with an eye on long term impacts," said Boxem. "I believe I have the ability and the experience to move us forward."

Boxem will be running against Earl Hawkins, who will be seeking re-election, for the position of Deputy Mayor.

The municipal election will take place on Oct. 24.

OFFICIALLY OPEN: Kim Walsh, owner of Get Stuffed Poutinerie, celebrated the grand opening of the new food truck, located on County Rd. 11, on July 16.

Poutine Truck celebrates grand opening locally

Written By Paula Brown
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

A new food truck in Shelburne is offering residents the perfect reason to make today a cheat day.

Get Stuffed Poutinerie welcomed customers for the first time as they celebrated their grand opening on July 16.

"We're finally open and ready to go. It's been crazy, but it's been really good," said Kim Walsh, owner of Get Stuffed Poutinerie. "The response from the community has been absolutely incredible; they've been really welcoming."

Get Stuffed Poutinerie's menu features a number of cheat day and comfort food classics from burgers, hotdogs and comdogs to deep fried pickles and cheese curds.

The food truck gets its namesake from its six different types of poutines including classic, pulled pork, crispy chicken, loaded potato, deep friend pickle, and OMG.

Speaking with the Free Press, Walsh said that their most popular sellers among customers are the pulled pork poutine and the crispy chicken poutine.

While Get Stuffed Poutinerie celebrated the official opening of the food truck, getting to the opening day was a long process that saw various set backs including construction delays and finding a place to park.

"Our hope was to get it started up early around April but there was one delay, after another, after another," said Walsh.

Get Stuffed Poutinerie will be at three upcoming events – Autofest Orangeville on July 30, Bolton Midnight Madness on Aug. 12 and the Shelburne Fall Fair on Sept. 17.

Get Stuffed Poutinerie is open Tuesday to Saturday from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. and on Sundays between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The food truck can be found parked at the Service Ontario, located on County Rd. 11.

"I want people to be happy when they come here, I want them to be happy with what they're getting and, obviously, I want the to be happy enough that they're going to want to come back anytime," said Walsh.

Thank a nurse

One of the online forums I frequent and contribute to on a regular basis, posed the question: "who is your hero?"

A reply came from one person who posted a photo of his wife. In the photo, she is sitting at a kitchen table eating a sandwich. Her hair is pulled back in a ponytail, and the photo was taken from the side and slightly behind. She is wearing the scrub type uniform worn by many hospital personnel. She appears tired, and maybe even slightly defeated as she sits there alone having a sandwich for dinner in a dim light.

The poster explains that this is his wife and she has just returned from her job as a stroke nurse at the local hospital where she completed a 14-hour shift. She will have a few hours of rest before returning to the hospital for her next shift.

She is his 'hero' he explained, because she takes care of people during stressful times, works long hours, and never complains. She is dedicated to her job.

Our hospitals are currently going into crisis mode on some levels as staff shortages and a larger volume of patients are overwhelming some of our health care centres.

It seems to have started with the pandemic when ICU beds were full and hospitals started taking criticism for things like having patients in the hallway rather than in a room.

I've been that patient. I was moved from a glass enclosed patient observation room where they kept an eye on me to make sure I didn't have internal injuries or brain trauma, to a hallway where I was told to expect to be there for a while as they were trying to find a room for me.

I didn't care. I was semi-conscious and couldn't move. It's not like I wanted to get up and practice my tap-dancing routine to pass the time. So I was laying like a sack of potato in a hallway rather than a room for a few hours – big deal.

Hospitals are designed to serve a certain size population. A sudden surge in illness will indeed mean more people paying a visit to an emergency room.

A hospital is a complex place. Everyone there has an important job that must be done to keep things working and make sure patients get the best of care, and hopefully are made well enough to go home.

From the people on the custodial staff who clean up the mess and sanitize the hallways and make sure the building's infrastructure is working properly to those who prepare the food – they all are important.

If one of those departments fails to do its job properly, you're going to have a big problem.

However, it is the nursing staff who bear the brunt of caring for patients, and quite often they are not given enough credit for doing a difficult job, and for the knowledge they have when it comes to caring for patients.

I once interviewed a triage nurse who had an incredible insight when it came to patients visiting the emergency room. After 30 years on the job, she could tell almost a glance and when hearing symptoms, what needed to be done and if a seemingly mild complaint could actually be something serious. Her experience saved a lot of people from having more complex issues, and got them in for treatment right away.

Our nurses have been overloaded with work over the past couple of years, and many have burned out and decided to quit, putting more pressure on those that remain.

I can understand the burn-out. When you're in nursing, you are dealing with the sick, the injured, and the dying on a daily basis. It must place a heavy strain on your mental well-being.

During my five-day hospital stay, I was constantly visited by nurses who poked me with needles, drew my blood, asked for urine samples, and took a blood pressure reading and checked my O2 levels.

Every single nurse who came into my room, did so with a smile on their face and a positive attitude.

I know that to them, I was probably just 'motorcycle accident guy in room 6,' and among many patients they were looking after. However, that positive attitude went a long way when it came to making me feel better about my situation.

I know I probably didn't show it at the time, but I was grateful to have such a dedicated staff looking after me at a time when I was like a sack of cement in a hospital bed, unable to even sit up.

Nurses are the backbone and strength of our medical system.

If you want to thank someone for their service to our communities, take a moment to thank a nurse.

BRIAN LOCKHART
FROM THE SECOND ROW

Last Arab democracy goes under

Tunisia would seem to have everything going for it. Average salaries are the third-highest in all of Africa's fifty countries, just behind Morocco and South Africa. Literacy is 97% among the under-30s, population growth is only 1% a year, and it's a democracy that functions under the rule of law. Or rather, it was.

The results of Monday's referendum are in, and the proposal to give dictatorial powers to Tunisia's usurper president, Kais Saied, got a 94.7% 'yes' vote.

It's true that only one-third of those entitled to vote actually did so, and that most of the opposition parties called for a boycott. But nobody was prevented from voting: the reason the opposition called on their supporters to abstain was that they knew how badly they would lose.

How did it come to this? Eleven years ago Tunisia was the birthplace of the 'Arab Spring', a wave of mostly non-violent democratic revolutions in the Arab world. Some were drowned in blood (Bahrain, Egypt), some turned into long-lasting civil wars (Libya, Syria, Yemen), and some just sputtered out (Algeria, Morocco). But Tunisia's revolution survived.

However, it did not thrive. Tunisia has had ten governments in the past eleven years, all of them crippled by the fact that the biggest party, with more than a third of the seats in parliament, was an Islamic party called Ennahda (Renaissance).

The Muslim Brotherhood-linked group was 'moderate' as these things go in Islamic circles, but its leaders had been living in exile until the overthrow of long-ruling dictator Zine al-Abidine Ben Ali in 2011. It quickly captured a third of the vote (mostly older people), and became the indispensable core of any coalition hoping to gain a parliamentary majority.

Moderate though it was, Ennahda's Islamic priorities made collaboration with any of the secular political parties a non-stop tug-of-war, so the coalitions never survived long and very little got done. The economy floundered, unemployment soared, and it was not just the Islamic party but democracy in general that got the blame.

Much the same process happened in Egypt, except a lot faster. The democratic revolution succeeded, the dictator Hussein Mubarak was overthrown in 2011 – and the first free election brought an Islamic party to power.

Unfortunately, the principles of the Muslim Brotherhood's 'Freedom and Justice Party' made cooperation with secular democratic forces impossible, so the army made an alliance with the secular democrats and overthrew it in 2013. Then it betrayed the gullible secular democrats too, and General Abdel Fatah el-Sisi has ruled unchallenged ever since.

In Tunisia in 2022, the budding dictator is a former law professor, Kais Saied. He was elected president three years ago in a free election, and he ruled until 2021 as a legitimate and law-abiding chief executive. But as popular anger at the stalemated parliament grew, he spotted an opportunity.

Last July he dismissed the prime minister, suspended parliament, and began ruling by decree. Two months ago he gave himself the power to fire judges as will, and promptly sacked 57 of them. And this month he staged the constitutional referendum that makes all these changes permanent.

The forms and rituals of democracy are observed, but the new reality is an autocratic ruler who can probably arrange his own re-election indefinitely – although to ensure no popular resistance he will eventually have to re-create the old police state as well.

The sad truth is that Kais Saied, a former law professor, has the support of the great majority of Tunisia's eleven million people for the moment. A recent opinion poll found that 81% of Tunisians prefer a strong leader, and 77% don't care if that leader is elected or not, so long as the economy creates jobs and delivers a decent standard of living.

The same poll, conducted by 'Arab Barometer', a research network based at Princeton University, found that similar majorities in favour of strong-man rule exist in almost all the other Arab countries. In only one Arabic-speaking country, Morocco, do most people disagree with the statement that a country needs a leader who can 'bend the rules' to get things done.

The Arab world is the least democratic region of the world because Arabs have come to believe that the economy is weak in a democracy. This is a bizarre belief, since almost all of the world's richest countries are democracies, but it sounds right to Arabs because their democracies don't work at all well.

The truth is that they don't work well for ARABS, because Arab democracies are usually sabotaged and often paralysed by the zero-sum competition between two rival revolutionary movements, democratic and Islamist. There's no short-term solution to that.

I am writing to express my concern and anger over the current health care crisis in Ontario. I wonder, how many days, weeks or months must go by before the person appointed to ensure that all Ontarians stay healthy and safe, addresses the crisis and appears in public with a robust plan to do so?

Sylvia Jones, Ontario's current Deputy Premier of Ontario, Ontario's Minister

Deadline to submit nominations for UGDSB trustee election set for Aug. 19

As the next municipal elections approach on October 24, 2022, the Upper Grand District School Board (UGDSB) is seeking nominations for school board trustees.

The deadline to submit a nomination is August 19.

The UGDSB is looking for individuals who can 're-engage, re-fresh, and re-imagine' the best education system for students in the community. Those who are elected will serve on the Board of Trustees for the next four years.

They are responsible for ensuring that their schools and staff have the professional capacity and the appropriate resources to meet both provincial and local board policies and priorities. They are equally responsible for spending the public funds they receive from the province in a cost-effective and appropriate way.

Boards hold their directors of education and, through their directors, their superintendents, principals, teachers and support staff accountable for meeting provincial and board policies and for ensuring that the board's funding allocation is spent in keeping with the board's budget.

Boards are accountable to their communities (their electors) and to the province for continuous improvement in the level of student achievement in their schools.

How to file nomination

Interested candidates must file nomination papers. Nomination papers may be filed in the office of the municipal clerk from May 1, 2022 until 2 p.m. on nomination day, August 19, 2022. Visit your municipality's website to find the location of your municipal clerk's office.

Who are school board trustees?

School board trustees have a big impact on shaping the education system for Upper Grand students. They are members of a team and play a vital team role. They are community leaders. They are responsible for establishing policy direction. They are individuals who are accountable to the province of Ontario, to the electorate and to themselves. Lastly, they are champions for equity in education.

- at least 18 years old
- not legally prohibited from voting
- not disqualified by any legislation from holding school board office

What's role do trustees have?

Trustees are required to carry out their responsibilities in a manner that assists the board in fulfilling its duties under the Education Act.

A trustee's role is to maintain a focus on student achievement and well-being and to participate in making decisions that benefit the entire board district, while representing the interests of their constituents.

Trustees work as part of a team (the Board) and only the team has the authority to make decisions or take action. A school board must place all students first when making decisions.

What are trustees' responsibilities?

Boards, in consultation with their administrators and their school communities (principals, teachers, support staff, and school councils) set local policies, priorities and budgets within the framework of provincial legislation and policy.

Boards establish their local budgets within the scope provided by their funding allocation.

Crickets from government

Almost two months have gone by and we get:

Crickets. Nothing. Yes, there have been tweets on social media regarding celebrating multiculturalism and the joys of Ontario strawberries. And Sylvia did choose to participate in a $1,000-a-plate fundraising event in Orangeville for the Ontario PC Party on July 20th, 2022, but in terms of addressing the ongoing closure of multiple emergency rooms across the province. We get:

Crickets. Sylvia Jones's portfolio is in CRISIS. Is this how the Minister of Health deems her time and energy best spent representing Ontarians during an unprecedented health emergency? It is well beyond time for Sylvia Jones to get to work in fixing the broken health care system in Ontario. This is a life and death situation and Ontario demands a health minister willing to step up to the job or step aside and allow someone else to do so.

Junior Cubs advance to second round after win over Barrie

Written By Brian Lockhart

The Mansfield Junior Cubs have advanced to the second round of playoffs after eliminated the Barrie Baycats in two games in the preliminary round.

It was a best-of-three series, or the first team to reach four points in the event of a tie game.

The Cubs finished in fourth place in the regular season with an 8-4-2 record and 18 points.

Game one of the series got underway on Thursday, July 21, on the diamond in Lisle.

Cody Bryan started on the mound for the Mansfield team.

Barrie opened the scoring in that game in the first inning scoring one, then following up with three runs batted in on a hit to deep centre field.

Mansfield's Brodie Hunter led off in the first inning with a double on a hit to centre field.

That was followed by a double from Ben Nicholson that brought in two runs and put the Cubs on the scoreboard.

The Cubs closed the gap in the second inning when Bryce Cameron hit a single, then stole second and third base to get into scoring position.

Brodie Nicholson had another big hit that drove in a run and closed the scoring to one run.

The Cubs kept up the pressure and were scoring in the later inning.

They won game one of the series, 9-6.

Game two of the series was slated for Sunday, July 24, in Barrie, but heavy rain caused the game to be postponed.

The teams returned to Mansfield on Monday, July 25, with Mansfield hoping to seal the deal and the Baycats aiming to win to keep the series alive.

That game ended with a 10-0 Mansfield win and the Cubs earned the right to advance to the next round.

The Cubs will now have to wait out the other junior series to see who they will face in the next round of competition.

Domino's Pizza recognized for contribution to minor hockey

Written By Brian Lockhart

Hockey may be the ultimate Canadian sport, but it's also the most expensive sport to play.

After an initial layout for equipment, you have to pay for league fees, ice time, refs, and travel expenses when travelling to tournaments.

Minor hockey does its best to fundraise to help pay for costs and help from community members goes a long way in supporting local teams.

Domino's Pizza in Shelburne has been very supportive of Shelburne Minor Hockey and the Club presented owner, Shubham Sharma, with a plaque of recognition as well as a framed Shelburne Wolves hockey jersey with the name Dominos on the back, to thank him for his support.

During this last season, Domino's allowed the Club to do a fundraiser at the local establishment every other Monday and sold pizzas for $10.00 with the proceeds going to Shelburne Minor Hockey.

Each fundraiser raised over $1,000 which was given to a different team each week. Seven teams received funds.

"Over the course of the season, these events have raised over $9,000," explained Kelly Gee, Shelburne Minor hockey sponsorship director. "Domino's has been amazing for minor hockey as well as the community. "Our numbers have been going down, especially with COVID, so one of the struggles the organization has is to keep the costs down. It is community organizations like this that keep the sport alive. We use the funds for tournament costs, extra skates on the ice, and sometimes just for the sweaters and hats to make them more of a team."

RECOGNIZING CONTRIBUTION: Domino's Pizza in Shelburne received special recognition for its support for Shelburne Minor Hockey during the past season. expenses. "With the rising cost of everything, the fundraisers help to keep the additional costs down," said Amy Beatty, Shelburne Minor Hockey fundraising director. "Going to tournaments is so much fun for the kids, but then we ask the parents for more money. These [Domino's] are the people helping people keep the costs down. He [Shubham] has done a lot for Shelburne Minor Hockey."

In third place, the Ivy Rangers finished with 34 points. They will face the Lisle Astros in their series.
