Wightman Telecom expands fibre internet services into Shelburne

Wightman, a Canadian telecommunications company that's operated for 115 years, has recently expanded its fibre-to-the-home (FTTH) technology to Shelburne.

Shelburne is the 13th community where Wightman has built a large-scale fibre optics project, with construction underway and most of the work set for completion by the end of 2024.

For over a century, Wightman has been a trusted provider, addressing the changing needs of communities across southwestern Ontario.

Wightman delivers comprehensive communication services for both homes and businesses, including internet, television, landline, mobility and business systems.

With high-speed internet and reliable communication services, Wightman helps Shelburne residents and businesses thrive in today's connected world.

Wightman's Shelburne office at 110 Centennial Drive highlights its dedication to personalized customer support and community engagement.

?By having a physical presence in the area, Wightman ensures that customers have access to internet service and support, tailored to their specific needs,? said Wightman in a press release.

?Why choose Wightman? Our mission is to connect communities and drive regional growth through innovative telecommunication solutions. Committed to customer satisfaction, technological progress and community engagement, Wightman is a trusted partner in your community.?

Wightman's expansion into Shelburne represents a significant milestone in the company's journey toward improving connectivity and supporting community growth.
